

Couples Need Housing for Summer School

Faced with its largest summer session enrollment in history, the University of Oregon also is confronted with a serious housing shortage for married couples, according to Dean Paul B. Jacobson, director of summer sessions. Most of the couples are Oregon high school teachers, he said.

Needed immediately are nearly 80 units varying from two and three room housekeeping units to three room housekeeping units to sessions, June 15 to July 23 and July 26 to August 27. A few rooms for single persons are needed, but for the most part they can be taken care of in University dormitories.

University couples attending regular sessions and Eugene citizens who are spending the summer on vacation away from home are being urged to list their apartments or houses for sub-lease to summer session students. Listings may be made with Ed Martin, University housing bureau, campus local 206.

Teachers attempting to meet certification requirements will comprise most of the summer session enrollment, although some regular students also will attend. The University program, which will include many outstanding national authorities as well as top men on the permanent staff, has attracted wide attention throughout educational circles with the re-

Eugene Gleemen Concert To Feature Classics And Waring

Fred Waring's arrangement of "Dry Bones" will be featured in the annual spring concert by the Eugene gleemen to be given next Tuesday at 8:15 p. m. in McArthur court.

Directed by Dr. Theodore Kratt, dean of the school of music, the 70-voice civic male chorus will have Milton Dieterich, also of the school of music, as guest cellist.

University students will be admitted to the concert upon presentation of registration cards.

James Kays, tenor and University senior, will repeat by request "Hymm to the Madonna" by Kremers with choral accompaniment.

The concert will benefit the Shrine hospital for crippled children in Portland, one of 16 in the United States. The Eugene Shrine club and Daughters of the Nile will sponsor the program.

Selections from Handel, Brahms, Grieg and others will be sung. As an encore, the group may also sing the Yale "Wiffenpoof Song."

The chorus includes several students and faculty members but mainly is composed of business and professional men of Eugene. Earl M. Pallett, of the University administrative board, is president.

Today the singers will leave to give performances in Medford and Drain, marking their fourth appearance out of town this year. They also sang during the Oregon press conference when Harold E. Stassen, presidential nominee, was here.

This is the group's 23rd year of existence.

Emeraldites Plan Banquet

About 100 invitations have been mailed to editorial and business workers of the Emerald for their annual banquet Wednesday evening at 6:30 in the Eugene hotel's Persian room. Billjean Riethmiller is in charge of arrangements.

Certificates of achievement and Emerald "O" pins will be presented by Bob Frazier, outgoing editor, and Bob Chapman, this year's business manager.

Some of the new staff members will be introduced by Bill Yates and Virgil Tucker, recently appointed editor and business manager for next year.

Short speeches are planned by some of the staff members and Dean George Turnbull of the journalism school.

The Emerald banquet will also include presentation of the Winship-Pegg plaque to the outstanding student who worked on the business side of the publication this year. The winner of Bert Moore's "Hardy Perennial" award for work in progress will be announced.

Lutherans to Hold McKenzie Outing

Last meeting of the year for the Lutheran student association will be a picnic to be held at the summer home of Rosemary McNutt, on the McKenzie river. The house is located two miles above Waterville. Cars will leave the YWCA at 2 p. m. Sunday for those who do not have rides already arranged.

Student chairmen of the affair are Vic Christianson and Cleo Stageburg. Lois Ann Helikson is the program chairman. Facilities for softball, ping pong, and croquet are present and a picnic supper will be held at 6 p. m. All students are cordially invited to attend this last meeting of the term.

The Co-op is closed Monday.
