

Y Membership Drive Sparked By Cabinet

The YWCA membership drive scheduled to begin Monday, September 27, will be launched through members of the Y cabinet and junior advisers, Shirley Lukins, chairman, stated, when they visit each women's living organization Monday night.

Each house has a solicitor within the organization to handle registration. The visiting members will explain the functions, activities, advantages, some statistics, and the system of registration of the Y, Miss Lukins said, and added that this year's goal is set at 1000 new members.

Each new student to become a member of the Y must fill out the registration card, and check the committees in which they are interested, pay the $1 fee, and return the cards to the Y bungalow by October. Old students on the campus who were Y members or not may join by filling out the membership card and paying the fee, Chairman Lukins explained.

YWCA committees planned this year that are available for new members include the membership committee, service committee, worship committee and workshop, social committee, house committee, publicity committee, public affairs committee, international affairs committee, and the luncheon club. Each committee will be explained Monday night at the living organization.

National Meet Set for Oregon

The University of Oregon's chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma, national advertising fraternity is preparing to be host to the national convention, tentatively dated June 22, 23, and 24 of next year.

Representatives from the various departments and schools of journalism all over the country will participate in the convention, the first national one of Alpha Delta Sigma to be held on the Pacific Coast.

This convention will precede the annual convention of the Advertising Association of the West, which consists of advertising clubs on the coast.

D.M. DuShane, New Director of Student Affairs, Dubbed 'Donald the Duck' by Students at Lawrence

"I was a Duck before I came to Oregon," Donald M. DuShane, Director of Student Affairs, cracked in an interview September 22. He explained that he had acquired the nickname early in life as a result of being named Donald. The above caricature, "Donald the Duck," is the work of a student cartoonist of Lawrence College, at Appleton, Wisconsin, where Mr. DuShane was a personnel dean for some years before coming to Oregon this fall.

Mr. DuShane, a dynamic person with a friendly smile and piercing dark eyes, occupies an office on the second floor of Emerald hall, where all student affairs centers are grouped this year. His tastes are reflected in the Cezanne still life

Inter-language Offered to UO Extension Class

Esperanto, a world inter-language, is now being offered correspondence students, Miss Mozelle Hair, of the extension division announced Friday.

A very simple language intended for international use, Esperanto was written 61 years ago by Dr. L. L. Zamenhof of Warsaw, Poland, after years of study. It stems from many national languages but contains no exceptions or irregularities typical of other languages.

Miss Hair described it as "very appropriate for international use."

The Institute of Educational research at Columbia university, which studied it in 1925, commented: "An average college senior or graduate after 20 hours of study will understand it better than French, German Italian, or Spanish after studying 100 hours."

"So far as I know," Miss Hair said, "it is the only such course offered in the country."

The course is being offered by the University extension division in Portland and may soon be offered at Corvallis.

Oregana Artists To Submit Drawings

Ed Cauduro, art editor of the 1949 Oregana, has requested that students who applied for positions as artists on the yearbook submit samples of their work.

He will accept samples either at the Oregana office in McArthur court or at the Phi Kappa Psi house before September 30.

Approximately 50 students filled out application to do artwork on the book, according to Cauduro.

Morris Speaks

The Christian church group will hold its first regular meeting Sunday evening at 6 in the YMCA, according to Art Johnson, officer of the group.

Dr. V. P. Morris, dean of the business administration school will be guest speaker.

and the Van Gogh landscape which he chose to harmonize with his office furnishings. The bright colors of the paintings suggest the straightforwardness of the man himself.

Confusion

Directly responsible to Mr. DuShane are the directors of men's and women's affairs, Mr. Vergil Fogdall and Mrs. Golda Wickham. Considerable confusion has arisen in the midst of new students as a result of the change of titles for these two directors from the old "Dean of Men" and "Dean of Women." When asked the reason for this renaming, Mr. DuShane explained that under the new system the only deans on the campus are academic deans, or heads of schools and departments, rather than personnel deans.

Also included under the Office of Student Affairs are the student counseling services, off-campus housing, and the Oregon Dads and Mothers.

When Mr. DuShane arrived in Eugene, he announced that he would endeavor to produce a general cooperative feeling between all campus groups. The first step in reaching this goal was the grouping together in one physical plant all the counseling services and student affairs offices of the University, so that students "will know where to go to get the answers," the director stated.

The general policy of the office, he said, will be not to "coddle students or baby them, but to make available the information the student wants, needs, and is willing to use."

"And Happier"

"More student government and individual responsibility," he continued, "makes for better citizens and better human beings. And," he added with a grin, "also a happier student body."

When visiting the campus last spring, Mr. DuShane was particularly impressed by the friendliness of the students and townspeople. Meetings with students—the executive council, interfraternity council, and dormitory presidents—together with the enthusiasm originally caught from President Harry K. Newburn, clinched his decision to come to Oregon, he said.

Varied Background

His earlier vocational background is varied: he has served as a newsman, apartment manager, and office manager for a sales agent of a glass and china corporation. However, there had always lurked in the back of his mind a desire to follow the path chosen by others of his family and go into education.

Summarizing the purposes of his Office of Student Affairs, Mr. DuShane declared: "The personnel services here are not designed to bother, annoy, or restrict unduly; we do want students to feel that they have friends when they need them. Our objective is to have things so well run at the University of Oregon that no one will ever have a complaint."

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series designed to acquaint entering students with the leaders of student affairs. Interviews with Mrs. Golda Wickham and Vergil Fogdall, directors of men's and women's affairs, will appear in later editions of The Emerald.

Duck Drivers Defy Draught

sat next to us in the Pelican cafe offered to bet his barley fields and take Stanford. Six guys down the counter took him up, and he retired to do some reading and research on the subject.

Bumped into Oregon people at every turn in the great Bay City. Must be several thousand down for the game and all are of the same opinion, to wit—forget about Roses and concentrate on the Indians.

Feeling quite naked without the familiar bump in the hip pocket but this is a civilized state, much as we hate to admit it. No shortage of spirits in bars which are spaced very conveniently through the city—every other door.

Weather Contrast

Sun shining, birds twitting and all that. Quite a contrast to snow and rainstorm encountered over the Willamette pass.

Drivers in San Francisco are very courteous. They won't run over you if you can out-run them, and the sidewalk is foul territory. Not so in Palo Alto where Duck season is wide open.

Spent my last two bucks to get into the game so am sending this collect. Know you will be happy. If we lose, we won't be home. Un-

Voters to Register In Co-op Monday

The voters' registration booth will remain open in the coop Monday from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m., according to Bob Davis, president of the Young Democrats, sponsors of the booth.

Any student who is registered at the University and who has been a resident of Oregon for 6 months and is otherwise eligible may register to vote.

Showers to Stop

Recent wet weather is expected to improve by Friday or Saturday, according to a report of the local weather bureau. Rainfall for Tuesday night and Wednesday morning measured four-tenths of an inch.
