Oregon Intramural Football Turns Out Varsity-Caliber Players

Oregon students who saw Min-turn hall's touch football team in action last year, will remember they were paced by Hawaiian-born Joe Tom, a little fellow who was a deadly passer and swift runner.

Tom proved he could hit his receivers consistently in intramural ball, so he decided to see how he stacked up against the "big boys" of the varsity squad. He turned out for spring football practice, and had improved so by this fall that he was spotted behind Oregon's all-American quarterback candidate, Norm Van Brocklin.

But Tom isn't the only boy who played intramural touch ball at Oregon and then went on to play college football.

Back in 1943, when there was no varsity grid team, there was a little guy who was outstanding in intramural football with his running and passing. His team didn't win the championship, but he was chosen as the player of the year.

The little guy who had played intramural football at Oregon was named Spike Cordiero. Spike played right half on the St. Mary's team, though he weighed only 155 pounds.

He teamed with the great Herman Wedemeyer to lead the Galloping Gaels into the Sugar Bowl, where the two halfbacks sparked a losing team.

Cordiero wasn't able to stay with Wedemeyer all through school, a term in service interrupting his collegiate grid career. He will return to his old intramural stamping grounds October 30, when the Gaels meet the University of Oregon on Hayward field.

Ducklings Rehearse For UW Pup Game

Game uniforms were the order of the day for Bill Bowerman's Frosh gridders yesterday, as the head Duckling mentor put on a full-dress rehearsal of next Saturday's game with the Washington Pups in Portland's Multnomah stadium.

Several new plays were introduced in yesterday's workout, among them a quick-opening quarterback sneak, which is seldom seen in Aiken-style football.

Tommy Edwards continued to shine at the left half spot, taking flat passes from the flanker position and scooting down the field toward a mythical goal line.

In the line, Ken Kirkpatrick turned in his usual smart line play. The big boy from Lewiston smashed open many a hole for Fullback Chuck Missfeldt and Halfback Emile Holeman.

His Boys Ready

DUCK COACH Jim Aiken will take his squad into action today at 11 a. m. PST, when the Webfoots meet the Rose Bowl champion Michigan Wolverines.

Indians Drop Game to Tigers

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2—(AP)—Jimmy Outlaw's single with two out and the bases loaded drove in two of the three runs the Detroit Tigers scored in the ninth to come from behind and defeat the Cleveland Indians, 5-3, yesterday. The loss cut Cleveland's first place margin over Boston and New York to one game, with two to go for all three clubs.

Ice Arena Director Sets Student Rates

The Eugene Ice Arena played host last night to many old skating faces from the ranks of Oregon students, together with many new ones. With ice in top condition for the winter opening, students vied with townspeople in getting used to skating again after the "iceless summer season."

Because of interest shown last night by large attendance, Arena manager Geary Worth has announced that he will maintain low prices to all University of Oregon students. As an opening feature last night, students were admitted for 40c, and Worth plans to leave it at that figure for the remainder of the season.

Big Nine Eleven Favored To Prolong Midwest Myth; Crowd of 60,000 Expected

By GLENN GILLESPIE

Emerald Co-Sports Editor

Coach Jim Aiken and his University of Oregon football team will attempt to disprove a Big-Nine football myth today at 11 a. m. (Pacific Standard time), when the upset-conscious Ducks square off with the 1947 champion Michigan Wolverines in Michigan Stadium at Ann Arbor.

More than 60,000 pro-Wolverine fans are expected to partially fill the stadium of 85,000 capacity this afternoon, when the two squads meet in a game that should answer questions about the quality of PCC vs. Big-Nine football. Approximately 100 Oregonians are expected to be in Ann Arbor for the game.

The Webfoots are at full-strength for this intersectional clash, while Coach Bennie Oosterbaan's powerful grid machine will be forced to operate without the services of Halfback Gene Derricotte. Oosterbaan is expected to call upon Charles Ortmann to fill Derricotte's left halfback spot.

Defensive Shift

A major shift in Oregon's defensive lineup will probably be made against the Rose Bowl champs, with Bob Roberts and Sam Nevills plugging the defensive tackle holes. Aiken plans to stick to the same offensive eleven which started against Stanford.

The Ducks are expected to play a wide-open game today, with Norm Van Brocklin throwing his deadly-accurate passes from the quarterback post. Ends Dick Wilkins and Dan Garza will probably be on the receiving end, along with backs George Bell, Johnny McKay, and Bob Sanders. Lefthalf Woodley Lewis will see action today, alternating with McKay.

A rugged Webfoot line is expected to hold up against Michigan's bag of football trickery today, with pass defense a possible weak spot. The Wolverines had a tough game with Michigan State last week, but proved they could go places through the air. Outgained on the ground 158 yards to 106, Oosterbaan's squad made 117 yards from passing. First downs favored the Wolverines 16 to 8.

The Oregon team has flashed exceptional spirit and fire in workouts this week, and will be "up" to add a major upset to their 8-game win streak. A Webfoot win today would bolster their Rose Bowl chances, although they are 14-point underdogs on most tip sheets.

Ducks Return Tomorrow

Corvallis radio station KOAC and KOIN in Portland will broadcast the game, starting at 11 a. m. Pacific time.

The Ducks will return to Eugene by air tomorrow at 7 p. m.
