

43 Attend Politic Rally In Igloo

"Democracy tomorrow depends upon the students of today," reasoned the University in sponsoring the student political rally in McArthur court Wednesday—for the announced purpose of "stirring up campus interest and knowledge of politics."

Forty-three persons attended.

Loudspeaking and seating arrangements—planned for an audience of from one to three thousand—had to be discarded. The entire program was carried on in one section of the balcony.

Progressive First Speech

Three students opened the assembly with discussions of three measures on the Oregon ballot. Dick Smurthwait spoke on the veterans' bonus, Boyd Peters on liquor over the bar, and Dotty Sorg discussed the deficiency fund bill.

Roy Stauffer, Progressive party speaker, addressed the audience, made up by more than one-half of active Young Republicans and

Allied Art Party Features Paris Cafe

A Paris underground cafe will be the setting for the Allied Art league party tonight at 8 p.m. in studio F of the Architecture annex. Cider and doughnuts accompanied by music will be provided.

Anyone taking a course in the Art school is automatically a member of the Allied Art league and is invited to come stag or bring a date.

Young Democrats—in the first political speech.

"Comrades, the opposition can find no other cause against us, so they call us Red," he said, "rather than attempting to settle the economic issues, which we raise."

'US Economy Cracking'

Stauffer accused the older parties of establishing a "war economy which could result in only two things—depression or war."

Bob Miller, speaking for the Socialists, accused that "the American economy is beginning to crack again at the seams." Under the inevitable business cycles of private economy, he said, another depression is unavoidable.

Socialists Needed

"America was never in such need of an influential, democratic, and socialistic party as it is today—and the ground is more fertile than ever before," Miller claimed. "The old parties will soon be disappearing from the national scene unless they modify themselves considerably."

John Chatt, Lane county Young Democrat president, went back to the Hoover administration for his arguments against the GOP. He claimed that unity is not a real issue in the campaign.

The Republicans are a young, adaptable party, Nancy Peterson emphasized in behalf of the GOP. She discussed tax reduction, foreign policy, civil rights, and the need for a continued study of labor problems.

State politics were the subjects of Clay Meyers, Young Republican president, and Bob Davis, state Young Democrat president.

Their argument centered around the candidates for governor, Douglas McKay and Lew Wallace, and around what Davis termed "Republican administrative scandals."

Warren Miller, graduate assistant in political science, served as moderator.
