

Mann to Address UO Audience Tomorrow in Igloo on Occupation

Born in a literary environment, Erika Mann, who speaks in McArthur court at 7:30 Thursday on "Occupation, Trial and Error", soon became a notable author in her own right. Her father, Thomas Mann, won the Nobel prize in 1929 for his writings. "The Magic Mountain" and "The Coming Victory of Democracy" were among his creations.

Soon after her family's voluntary exile from Germany, Miss Mann began a career which has been brilliantly successful in all of its varied phases. She traveled widely in Europe, both before and after the war. She is the author of "School for Barbarians" and "The Lights Go Down", and cooperated with her brother, Klaus Mann, in writing "Escape to Life" and "The Other Germany".

She studied as a girl, under Max Reinhardt, the famous playwright, and her own play, "Peppermill", a satirical revue, met with extensive approval. During the war, she won distinction as a foreign correspondent and radio news analyst, writing for American and British magazines and newspapers, and making frequent broadcasts for BBC.

In the spring and summer of 1947, Erika Mann toured Europe, investigating postwar conditions and assisting in the prosecution of the Nuremberg trials. She is currently engaged in a lecture tour of the United States.

'Atomic Energy' Discuss Topic

Dr. E. S. Wengert, head of the political science department, and R. T. Ellickson, associate dean, graduate school, and professor in the physics department, will lead a discussion on "Atomic Energy, Its Physics and Politics," at a dinner meeting of the Social Science club on Monday, November 15, at 6:15 p.m. at the Faculty club.

From a political point of view, Dr. Wengert will discuss control of atomic energy within the U. S. Under the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, and the program of control by the federal government which has resulted, atomic energy is a monopoly in the U. S., Dr. Wengert pointed out.

Dr. Ellickson will discuss atomic energy from the physicist's point of view. Such questions as, "Does the physicist want to work for the federal government? and what does the physicist think of government monopoly of atomic energy?" will be presented by Dr. Ellickson.

Law Fraternity Holds Conclave

"The Lawyer's Place in Modern Society" was the theme of the speech given by Attorney Calvin Souther at the fall conclave of the Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity, in Portland Saturday.

Twenty active members of the organization were present at the meeting, which was sponsored by the alumni. James Bedingfield, junior in the law school and chapter historian, reported on their current activities.

President (Justice) Ralph W. Johnson of the Oregon chapter thanked the speakers and introduced the chapter members. A reception, dinner, and a business meeting were also part of the program.

Tea Petitions Due

Petitions for chairmanships in the AWS Christmas benefit tea should be turned in by next Monday to Jeannine Macaulay, general chairman, at the Alpha Gamma Delta house.
