

Convention Brings UN Authority

"The United Nations in a Troubled World" will be Dr. C. Easton Rothwell's subject in a talk before the northwest conference of International Relations clubs.

In addition to being the main speaker, Rothwell will represent the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the organization sponsoring the federation of independent international relations clubs on campuses throughout the nation.

Presently vice-president of the Hoover Institute and Library on War, Peace, and Revolution at Stanford university, Rothwell has been intimately connected with the U.N.

He was executive secretary to the 1945 United Nations conference in San Francisco, and in 1945-46 was secretary general of the United States delegation to the U.N. He has also served as executive secretary of the state department secretariat.

"Rothwell is among the three top persons in the United States in his knowledge of the United Nations," Dr. Charles Schleicher, professor of political science and adviser to the campus I.R.C., commented.

In addition to his direct work with the U.N., Rothwell worked with Leo Pasvosky, special assistant to the secretary of state, in the state department's planning for post-war reformations.

Rothwell graduated from Reed college, and received his advanced degrees from the University of Oregon and Stanford.

The I.R.C. conference will be held here Friday and Saturday with delegates present representing clubs from colleges throughout the Pacific Northwest and Canada.

Scenes from Plays Acted at Libe Today

Scenes from "School for Scandal" and "Medea" will be enacted today at 4 p.m., in the browsing room of the library. They are under the direction of Mrs. Otilie Seybolt and Horace Robinson, assistant professors of speech.

Everyone is invited to attend this special program sponsored by house librarians.

Floods Threaten In Deep South

By The Associated Press

Surging floodwaters moved toward central and southern parts of Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina today while residents prepared to battle new river crests.

Meanwhile, early morning temperatures dipped to near zero in parts of the plains and Rocky Mountain states and light snow fell in the Northern Great Lakes and Northwest Pacific states.

The Coast Guard speeded motor-powered assault boats, utility craft and dingies to Camden and Selma in Southern Alabama. The rescue boats will aid in evacuation if record crests strike as expected.

Rain-swollen rivers and streams in South Carolina's central area rose to new heights. Swamp lands been cut 25 per cent by high water for several weeks.

Flood waters from the Ocmulgee river knocked out five of Macon, Georgia's 10 pumping station filters. Georgia and Alabama Power Company engineers estimated the state's electricity production had been cut 25 per cent by high water and mechanical failures.

Waters were nearly four feet deep in parts of Montezuma, Ala. The city was reported without drinking water because of flood seepage.

Military Will Meet

Scabard and Blade, national military honorary, will meet tonight at 6:30 in the ROTC building, said Carl Miller, president.

Rumors of many kinds are flying around and deals are being cooked up by hopeful Texas bound Ducks.

Marial Means is more than just casually interested in the possibility of flying down and we are checking on the availability of a couple of cargo planes. The pilots aren't as hard to get as the planes, however.

One thing that we have heard is that moguls from Southern Pacific are mulling over a deal with the University. Best news we heard (strictly in the rumor stage) is that there might be a deal whereby the University paid part of the fare and a big Duck train made up for the occasion.

We can see it now. A 20-car train zipping along the rails and right in the middle—a tank car. A tank car full of beer! Hoses attached to the refreshment car and leading to all the other cars of the train. What a ride that would be!

Portland alumni were more than eager to head to Texas. Already the $250 plane trip to Dallas and back is signed up for. Just like that. Looks like everyone will be there the way things are shaping up.

We neglected the college humor mags for some time, so here goes: Co-ed—Oh, Prof, whatever do you think of me now that I've kissed you?"

Prof—You'll pass.—Trussbuster Junior—Man, am I scared. I just got a card from a veteran telling me he'll shoot me if I don't stay away from his wife.

Soph—Well, why don't you? Junior—He didn't sign his name. —Shaft (Pd. Adv.)

U.S. Wants Troops Out of Korea

PARIS, Nov. 30 (AP)—The United States is reported backing a United Nations resolution for withdrawal of American troops from Korea as soon as practicable.

Informed sources said yesterday the U. S. will be among the powers sponsoring a joint resolution on Korea to come before the political committee after the Palestine debate.

Russia already has begun removing her troops from North Korea.
