Surplus Stores Running Low on GI Long Handles

Surplus stores were running out of once hard to move long underwear. Auto supply shops did a thriving business in tire chains. The bamboo trees bent to the ground under the weight of snow in Pasadena. The South Pasadena postoffice snow shovel, Washington regulation issue, got its first workout.

Las Vegas, Nev., which slogans "fun in the sun," measured eight and a half inches of snow on the level. Altadena, a suburb just above Pasadena, had five inches on the ground.

Prolonged severe cold, which has frozen over rivers and clogged streams with ice, kept a strangle hold on the Pacific Northwest's hydro-electric water supply.

Electricity users in Washington, Oregon, and northern Idaho were cautioned they must use only a minimum of power to maintain a "margin of safety" in the electricity supply.

The kind of weather that comes in mid-May ranged from the Carolinas to New Orleans. Maximum temperatures were in the high 70's or low 80's. Several cities recorded record heat for the date.

Flowers bloomed and lawns were a lush green. Three days of bright sunshine and warm soft air from the Gulf perked up nature like the breath spring.

The Plains states got a respite from the snow but continued to dig out from last week's blizzards. The 12h Wyoming victim of last week's storm was found frozen to death near Cheyenne, Wyo.

Gordon, Neb., town of 2,100 isolated for 10 days by drifts, was getting relief from a critical food and fuel shortage. The last highway snow barrier into the town was removed Wednesday and tank trucks were on their way out of the city for loads of fuel oil. Food shipments from Omaha will arrive Thursday.

The Southwestern Bell Telephone company estimated its lines suffered nearly $2,000,000 damage from sleet in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas. The glaze covered most of west Texas and the panhandle. The storm caused two deaths in Texas.

Visiting Adviser Dick Williams Offers Students Going on Tour Consultations

Dr. J. Hudson Ballard, professor of Christian psychology at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, California, will be in Eugene from Thursday, January 18, until Sunday, January 16, to counsel Presbyterian and other students planning to go into the ministry or any branch of religious work.

On Friday, January 14, he will lecture Dr. Means' 11 o'clock class in Psychology of Religion, and students may have appointments with him during the day. His headquarters will be at Westminster house.

He will meet the University Religious Council for discussion Saturday morning, and will deliver a sermon at the Central Presbyterian church on Sunday.

Sunday afternoon, Dr. Ballard will include in his program meetings with the Genevas club and high school groups of the Presbyterian church, at Westminster house. These meetings will be followed by a supper and a forum led by Dr. Ballard.

Dr. Ballard, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, received his Doctor of Divinity degree from Occidental college at Los Angeles in 1935. He was vice president of the seminary from 1943 to 1945, and was pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Portland for a time. Several religious works by him include Spirit, Soul and Body.

Dick Williams, student union director, will leave the Oregon campus on January 22 to make an inspection tour of union buildings on university campuses all over the country. The universities included in his tour will be Minnesota, Wisconsin, Cornell, Purdue, Illinois, Iowa, and Nebraska.

Purpose of the trip is to study the operation and administration—staff personnel and union committees—of the various buildings. More specific information is needed on operation, which includes a cafeteria, game areas, accounting systems and procedures. Experience that different schools have had with types of furnishings, equipment and supplies will be valuable in planning Oregon's building.

Williams will also go to New York City to work out a contract with a professional interior decorator. The decorator will design decoration for all public areas in the building and give advice on the work.

Toil Spoiled

do? Oh, let's go back and have another drink."

Hank felt he could use one by that time himself. It took more strength than he had to keep his disillusioned friend on his feet. "Let's just walk a couple more blocks," Hank said, wondering if he'd get the big hulk to his house before he became drunk smelling his breath.

The last time Bull fell on the snow, they were within a few yards of his house. One of the fellows living there helped drag the body up to the front porch, both of them steaming faster than a narrow-gauged railroad engine before they dropped him.

Hank couldn't leave without hearing the rest of the story. "How can you get that excited over a dance?" he asked. "The decorations must have been terrific. Didn't it go over?"

To a certain extent, yes," he yelled. "The women showed up, the food showed up, the orchestra showed up . . ." Three of his housemates came outside and grabbed hold of Bull in case he became violent. "But it was too dark! You couldn't see a damn thing!"

The fellows picked him up and carried him through the door. As As Hank walked down the stairs, he could hear him shouting: "It was just another house dance—just another house dance."
