Reporters Find 'Typical' Coed Very Versatile

By Aileen Betschart and Joan Manning

Upon discovering that we were to interview the co-ed of the week, we put our yo-yos back in their proper places in the Emerald files, and beelined for our respective typewriters. We pounded out our slug line and then it dawned upon us. We needed one more thing—a co-ed.

A certain young lady caught our eye. Here was just what we wanted! A typical co-ed, typical in that her legs were crossed and she sported two-heads.

"Are you a co-ed?" we asked. "I've never served on a clean-up committee in my life, and I don't like to wear shoes, if that's what you mean."

"What class are you in?" we queried her.

"My ultimate ambition is to become a beachcomber—on a big beach. Palm trees, soft music, romantic moonlight—I come from Hawaii, you know."

"Are you all-out for activities?" "That's an interesting question. I've been here four years, and besides, I went to seven different high schools and the Cotton Bowl."

"Hmmm. What do you think about moving the Rocky Mountains into the Gulf of Mexico via ants?" we ventured.

"I," she retorted indignantly, "am an associate editor of the glad rag (the Emerald), secretary-treasurer of ASUO, a member of Theta Sigma Phi and Hui-O-Kamaaina. Not only that, but last year I was a Phi Theta, and furthermore, I speak pidgin English."

"Care for a smoke?" "Could you tell by looking at me that I'm an ex-Amphibian? But I had to drop out. I don't know how to swim, you know."

"Could we ask you a personal question?" "Sure, my name's Diana Dye and —"

At this point our co-ed glanced at her watch, "Omigosh! See ya later. I'll be late for my game of snooker."

Plans Are Started For Annual Hop

Under the sponsorship of the YWCA sophomore commission, the traditional University Heart Hop will again be included in the Valentine's day celebrations. This is to be a progressive dance, being staged at four or five women's living organizations on the campus. These houses wishing to petition for the dance will have opportunity to do so in the near future.

Led by Sally Terril and Leslie Tooze as co-chairmen plans are getting under way for this thirteen year old campus tradition. Climax of the event will be the coronation of the King of Hearts who will rule over the evening.

For the past two years this has been done at the Friday night's basketball game after which the hop got under way. Six finalists from representatives of all the men's living organizations are selected by a committee of queens composed of some of the campus beauty contest winners.

Final voting will be completed by all purchasers of tickets for the dance. The official coronation names two runners-up who will act as knaves to the king and will be traditionally dunked at the termination of the dance.

This girl-date-boy affair was originally started as an afternoon function in 1936 and being leap year, it was called the Ladies Leap. It proved to be such a successful event it was again staged the following year, however, the name no longer being appropriate, was changed to Heart Hop and has since been an annual affair.

Sounds Like the Guy's

(Continued from page six) gate. As the water roars into the lounge our hero mops to the tune of squeaking shoes and remarks from his buddies that they didn't know he was majoring in marine engineering.

After the water has evaporated or is otherwise disposed of our hero learns that he should not have mixed white undershirts with colored sox. When he wears one of these altered shirts few will suspect that under his rude, conservative exterior lurks a surrealistic color pattern normal nowhere but in Hollywood.

The no-longer laundry expert has concluded it is cheaper to buy a pair of sox.

Nice perfume, too bad you had to spill it."

What's This---- Men Superior?

(Editor's note: The women's page has no idea who wrote the following story. Just pushed aside a typewriter and there it was.)

"Gimme five hundred words on why men are superior to women."

When approached by Donna Snackson, women's page editor with this assignment I was flabbergasted.

"I'm flabbergasted," I said.

The very apparentness to this question seemed to make the whole thing a little ridiculous. But just to humor Donna I sat down at my 1903 Remington, whipped out a well-thumbed sheet of yellowed copy paper, adjusted it in the typewriter and went to work.

Then I unreeled my tie from the roller and started over again, reading my notes upside down and backward off my tie.

Sizing up the situation, I asked myself, what did I know about women?

"What do you know about women," I asked myself. This was a discouraging note to start out on.

Using the Emerald, an infallible source, for material, I started. "Seven out of ten women are pretty. The other three go to Oregon." This seemed to be the extent of the Emerald's feelings on the situation.

I noticed another little filler, though, that with a little adapting, serves to sum up the situation: Roses are Red, Violets are Blue, I'm flabbergasted.

Potluck Dinner

Friendly house will have a potluck dinner Saturday at 6 p.m. Folk dancing to Danish records will follow dinner. The records will be furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Skovvo of Junction City who will lead the dancing.

Everyone is invited and married couples may bring their children.

Fashion Foibles

The kings and queens of the fashion world have emphasized detail this year in clothes for every occasion. This detail is brought in with striking combinations of colors, rows of buttons, double cuffs and pockets, and unusual tricks to give eye-catching effects.

Colors can give any outfit style. Designers have taken four shades of grey and worked these into skirt gores, used them in pockets or made them look as if a painter has just over or under tinted to produce an unusual effect.

Buttons are beginning to take the lead in detail this season. Rows of tiny buttons are being put on formals, dressy dresses, sport clothes and coats. They can be gold, silver, gem, plastic or covered buttons—they can be plain, fancy, antiquated or irregular shaped—they can be large or small—but they must produce the result of detail.

Double cuffs, pockets and collars are novel and striking to anything that can take them. These doubles usually have two colors—for example, a double collar on a champagne colored satin dress uses one coca-colored collar and the other one is the same as the dress.

All of these ideas dictated by the fashion world are designed for any type of costume and they will give new ideas for the coming spring wardrobe. A. G.

With the Legislators

Vice President Barkley told the crowd his car got caught in a bad traffic jam as he approached the hotel.

"That was the only time in my life I ever felt a need for Dewey," Barkley cracked. "Maybe he could have unsnarled, untangled, and unraveled things."

Mr. Truman joined in the laughter, and asked:

"What chance does a president have with a vice president like that?"
