Polls Open For Women At Y Today

The first of next year's important student offices will be filled today when the women students of the University go to the polls to select their leaders in AWS, WAA, and the YWCA.

Polls will open in the YWCA building immediately following the nominating assembly at 12:30, and will close at 6 p.m. Nominations will be accepted from the floor, and the candidates introduced at the assembly.

Vying for president of the Associated Women students are Mildred Chetty and Marie Lombard.

Each year the AWS sponsors, among its activities, a weekend for Oregon high school senior women, and the lost-and-found auction. Bev Pitman is outgoing president.

WAA Nominees

Joan Carr and Bonnie Gienger have been nominated as candidates for president of the Women's Athletic association. The aim of the WAA, according to outgoing President Betty Jean McCourry, is to further active interest and participation in athletics by University women.

Laura Olson's job as YWCA president is being sought by nominees Billie Jean Riethmiller and Velma Snellstrom. The job would entail supervision of all student activities of the YW.

Other Nominees

Candidates for secretary of AWS are Jackie Barbee and Anne Case; for treasurer, Eve Overback and Catherine Russell; for sergeant-at-arms, Rosemary Beatty and Marian Christenson; for reporter, Donna Buse and Betty Simpson.

Other nominations for WAA offices include Barbara Kletzing and Lilly Kobayashi, secretary; Carol Lippman and Mary Myers, treasurer.

Vaudeville Plans Begin Buzzing

Enthusiasm is developing in campus living organizations as they form plans for their acts in Oregon's All-Campus Vaudeville show, April 15, with a meeting of house representatives scheduled for tonight, 6:30 at the Alpha Delta Pi house.

At this meeting Valma Snellstrom, program chairman, will explain the requirements for judging and other details.

Letters were sent to all house presidents Saturday explaining the show, which will serve the dual purpose of entertainment and opportunity to reveal hidden talent, and a contribution to a worthwhile cause, since all proceeds from the 50 cent ticket sales have been scheduled for the World Student Service Fund.

A reprint of the letter follows:

"Dear House President,

"Preparation for Oregon's all-campus vaudeville show are gathering momentum. This is your show and each organization will enter an act in competition for the three permanent trophies offered for first, second, and third prize.

"Entries may consist of skits, dances, magic acts, singing, slapstick routines, and so forth. . . . There will be preliminary eliminations, with the final judging in McArthur court Friday, April 15, the date of the show.

"Tickets will be sold not only on the campus, but in downtown Eugene, and from door to door throughout the residential districts. The funds will go to the campus-supported charity, the World Student Service Fund.

With the ROTC Military Ball only three days away, the third and final regiment of Little Captains, Gay Williams, Beverly Zamsky and Pat Husbands, is in review. The Little Colonel, chosen from nine candidates, will be announced at the dance Saturday night.

"I try to live up to my name," says Little Captain Gay Williams, who is better known as Shirley to her professors. Judging from the activities of this five foot two and one-half inch junior with dark brown eyes and auburn hair, one might say she succeeds.

People, horseback-riding, and swimming are her chief interests. A native of Olympia, Washington, she says the salt water of Puget Sound beats everything for swimming—"It's the water!" For the past four summers Gay has done clerical work at the state house in Olympia.

Lock-up Lady

As house manager of Delta Gamma, it's Gay's duty to see that everything is running smoothly. She is also known as the girl who sends the gentlemen home at 10:30. "I'm famous for that," she smiled.

With plans for teaching vocal and instrumental music in secondary school, Gay is now majoring in music. She is corresponding secretary of Mu Phi Epsilon, national music honorary. This year she was awarded the annual scholarship from the organization's alumnae.

Even with the threat of finals drawing closer, Gay is not worried. Final week is the best time, she believes. "You're completely on your own, and just one big party follows another after each test is over!"

Bev Zamsky Petite

"She's a tiny little thing, five feet two inches tall with black hair and dark brown eyes," is the way Little Captain Beverly Zamsky is described by her sorority sisters at Alpha Phi. Beverly is now at home in Klamath Falls taking care of her ill mother. She plans to return this

Kline Sees Long Lines Next Term

Only 2150 students have completed registration as yet, J. D. Kline, assistant registrar stated yesterday.

Unless substantial numbers complete registration this week over 3000 students will have to register March 28, registration day of next term, he said.

This week is the last of pre-registration, which ends at noon Saturday. Although most of the student body picked up their registration material and filled out their class cards, most of them have not checked with the housing secretary, paid their fees and turned in their material.

First Comers Rate

In case of any classes being too full students who have officially been registered will have preference. Also, if there are large numbers of students registering at the first of next term, many will be forced to register late, and late registration fees will not be waived.

Comparing the 2150 who have signed up this term to the 4007 who finished their registration early last term, Kline warned that there will be some long lines on March 28.

Two-Thirds Veterans

Over two-thirds of those signed up this term are veterans. All students who have completed the initial steps are urged to complete their registration as soon as possible.

Although the final steps may be finished this week, the various schools and departments are not signing students up for classes now. This was to have been completed last week, and any further registration for classes will have to be done at the beginning of next term.

USA Plans Paper On UO Government

A United Students association publication—"USA Party Punch"—will be distributed on the Oregon campus this week.

According to members of the USA steering committee, approximately 4500 copies of the paper will be printed. Copies will be distributed through all living organizations; off-campus students will be able to get the paper at the Co-op, the YWCA, and the YMCA.

Purpose of the paper will be to "inform students about the United Students association" and to present a general survey of student government at Oregon.

The Weather

Cloudy with rain Wednesday. Partly cloudy Thursday with occasional showers. Continued mild. High Wednesday 62. Low Wednesday night 40 degrees.

BA School Sponsors Conference

A conference for Oregon business women, sponsored by the school of business administration and Phi Chi Theta, women's business honorary, will be held this Thursday.

The conference will open Thursday morning with a welcome, extended by Dr. Victor P. Morris, dean of the school of business administration. A talk on "Business as a Profession," given by Mrs. Clare Hart of Eugene, will follow.

Mrs. Caryl Carosant, of Seaside will speak at the luncheon, which will be held at the Faculty club. Her subject will be "Why Carry a Business Career." At the afternoon session, Miss Aline Phillips will address the group on "Your Future as a Secretary." A tea will follow this talk, which will be held at Gerlinger Alumni hall.

At head of Russell's home decoration department, Clare Hart has become one of Eugene's most successful business women. Following the death of her husband, Lance Hart, formerly of the University art school, Mrs. Hart opened a gift shop in her home, and a few years later moved to her downtown location in connection with Russell's department store.

MRS. CARYL CAROSANT

Optometrist to Talk

Mrs. Carosant, a Seaside optometrist, is president of the Seaside Business and Professional Women's club, and is prominent in the Seaside Chamber of Commerce and the National Auxiliary of the American Legion. She has the degrees of Doctor of Optometry from North Pacific College of Optometry and Doctor of Optometric Science from Southern College of Optometry at Memphis, Tenn. She has been an instructor at both schools, as well as at Pacific university College of Optometry at Forest Grove, Oregon, national lecturer at the Optometric Postgraduate Clinic
