Coed's Clothesline

By Maryfran Lorain and Kay Kuckenber

Traveling this summer? Are you tired of just looking at travel folders without going anywhere, and have decided this is going to be your summer for seeing the "world"?

Okay! But what to wear? Naturally this depends almost entirely upon your destination. On a trip to Hawaii, which many are planning for this summer, light clothes of all styles, colors and fabrics are in order. Hats, except for large straws, are seldom worn in the Islands. Cotton, as in the past, is the leading fabric. Light colored cottons are in demand for bathing suits, as they are quick drying, easily manageable, and flattering. Cotton formals are also the order of the day, with separate skirts and blouses playing an important role. Joan Nelson, one of the lucky girls making this trip, is taking a summery, but practical, strapless cotton formal. Joann's dress has a white background sprinkled with various colored flowers. It is a dress that is easy to pack and yet comes out of a suitcase looking fresh. Also Hawaii bound are Roberta Tussing, Ann Darby, and Luwayne Engwall, who seem to have a yen for cottons judging by the pert outfits they are already wearing on the campus.

Cottons Receive Honors

Sharing top honors with cottons are the ever popular rayons and silks. These pack easily, take up little space, and seldom wrinkle. Always pretty, and extremely feminine, they make excellent afternoon dresses, as well as glamorous evening gowns. Marilyn Winetrout plans to include several of these versatile silks in her wardrobe for Hawaii. Wraps are usually limited to short jackets, preferably the new fly-away jackets that are so popular today. Sweaters have come into their own as wraps for even the dressiest outfits.

Light weight suits of sharkskin, linen, and chambray are smart and cool. With them, over-the-shoulder bags are particularly appropriate. Cynthia Griffin, also intending to make Hawaii her home this summer, shows how fashionable and chic these bags can be.

Destination Europe

If Europe is your destination, the major test your clothes must pass is taking up little space. Boat transportation as scarce as it is, many girls are finding themselves flying across the Atlantic, so cutting down on the number of clothes to be taken is important. For European travel you must pack wisely to be able to dress smartly. For this reason, quick drying nylons, and uncrushable cottons as Carolyn Parker and Virginia Huston are proving by their selection of clothes. These outfits should be interchangeable for variety. Shoes should be kept at a minimum for they take valuable space. European travelers should remember to avoid white, which soils easily, and laundry service is difficult, if not impossible to obtain. Sally Waller and Casey Jones, also future European travelers, will be sure to keep this fact in mind when packing their grips.

Last, but not least, there is the item of luggage. Luggage should be lightweight and easy to handle, for you may have to carry your own bags in many parts of Europe. Slip covers are very necessary to protect suitcases in travel against the hard handling they may receive. The newest covers are being shown in gay plaids and checks.

You Want to be Different?

By Hazel Rawson Cades

There are times when a girl feels the need of doing herself over. A flash of insight or a clear view in a full-length mirror tells you that your decorating plan no longer fills the bill. Or suddenly you're just plain bored with the way you look. Whatever the stimulus, if you decide to do something about yourself there's no time like the present.

Time to Change Colors?

Every cataloging system needs occasional revision. Has that red hair deepened to auburn? Have your skin tones darkened or grown more delicate? Before you shop for new spring clothes why not check your makeup in a good light? Or better still stop at a cosmetic counter and get expert advice. You may find that with a fresher makeup the black you had begun to think was wrong for you still looks right. Or that a warmer-toned makeup and one of the new spring costume colors add up to a prettier you.

Time to Change Lines?

Check your hairdo. Maybe you're a bigger girl now and that mop of hair should be pruned for symmetry. Perhaps your face and neck are thinner and you need a hairdo with more fullness at the sides. Has your hairline slipped back? Try the flattery of short soft waves. Throat and lower part of face heavier? Have your hair cut shorter or arrange it up off the neck. Eyebrows need remodeling? Overgrown they clutter; overplucked they look hard. Tweeze with care. Keep the space above the nose clear (inner points of brows aligned with corners of eyes). Remove wandering hairs and shorten outer ends of brows slightly if they dip too far and pull down your face. For sparse pale brows—the eyebrow pencil!

Time to Change Technique?

Has last year's grooming plan outlived its usefulness? In the teens, oil glands may become more active, making it necessary to wash the face and hair oftener and to use corrective preparations. The older skin often requires more protection. The use of different cosmetics may make necessary different methods of skin care. For example, those lovely long lasting tinted makeup bases do need extra cleansing for complete removal.

Time to Change Point of View

Don't make the mistake of becoming type-set. Cute little girls grow up. Campus goes to business. The tailored type some day may look better in dressmaker suits, softer hairdos and gentler makeup. The fluffy type may develop a need for chic simplicity. Your face, your hair, your figure inevitably change from year to year. Keep a sharp lookout and see that your goodlooks plan keeps up with you.

You Name It

By Fred Young

Still lots of time left in our "name the column" contest. Whoever submits the best title wins two cartons of Phillip Morris cigarettes with the runner-up receiving one carton. The prize might go to Editor Yates for his "You Name It." Deadline is this Saturday noon, and entries are to be left in the editor's office at the Emerald shack.

The balmy weather seemed to have the same or some effect on the campus with many mergers being made and the like. The ADPis took stock and found Jonnie Baker with Roger Mockford's Theta Chi pin, Myrleen Larson with a sparkler from Sig Ep Willard Christenson, and also engaged Pam Williams to Pat Byrne, a Stanford Sigma Nu.

Pi Phi Aileen Betschart decided April 1st to be a good day to announce her engagement to a "friend" back home in California. Other Pi Phi listings feature Connie Jackson with Don Fair's Theta Chi badge. And not to be overlooked is Pi Phi president Ann Gillenwater's snaring of C. Perry Mobley's White Cross.

The Kappa clan celebrated Sally Lucas' recent engagement to John Madden, ex-U. of O. Also Punky Fletcher's acquisition of Lynn Hamilton's ATO pin.

Argyle action taking place as Theta Georgie Oberteuffer purls some for SAE Don Dunn.

Other Theta news says that Jeanne Hoffman and Betsy Stelle weren't really fooled by the "April Fool" tag on the mammoth box delivered by Bob Gray and Lin Sloan which after great exploration was found to contain their Sigma Chi pins. It turned out no one was foolin'.

AOPi Joan Nichols has been spotted sporting Raph Rathjen's Kappa Sig badge. Did anyone mention AOPi Rene Cowell's engagement to Sigma Nu grad Ray Gannett in New York's Hotel Astor? Girl going steadily is Elaine Nemerovsky with Chi Psi Ken Saxson.

Unheeded of the sage advice of the wise upperclassmen Phi Delt frosh Gene Moody and Jim King gave pins to Dorothy Engbert of Portland and Sue Snook, OSC Chi-O. We'd heard dealing with the Phi Delt is risky business as they are apt to give you the stall.

The Fijis report the way they figure it progress was made over the weekend. No pins were returned. And, Ray Heidenrich and Paul Smith were representing the Red Cross at the "Y" retreat this weekend.

The Alpha Phis report business as usual with the croquet course already in mid-season shape. Also, Mary Moser with ATO Don Thomas' pin. And were Nancy Hodecker and Chi Psi Dick Cooksey really fooling about their first of April Engagement? It isn't considered water under the bridge down there any more.

Our honorary isn't completely organized yet. We still have a few wires to tap as our coverage becomes more comprehensive, so hang with us.

And remember! A maximum of smoking for a minimum of thinking, this week only.

Junior Weekend

All living organizations are requested to send representatives to the Alpha Omicron Pi house at 7 p. m. Thursday, April, 7, to make arrangements and assign pairings for the Junior Weekend festival, according to Phil Patterson, chairman of the float parade.

Co-ed's Activity List Includes Argyles

Petite Marie Lombard is rejoicing about the arrival of spring term. Now she can be seen more often than ever driving around the campus in "Wilbur," her brother's car. However, Marie has a long list of activities which gives her more to do these days than drive around.

Having always been interested assistant chairman of Dads' weekend last term.

At Cottage Grove high school Marie held several class offices, belonged to several honoraries, and was president of the girls' league. Since coming to Oregon, she has been secretary of AWS and Kwama, fashion editor for the Oregana, chairman of invitations for Dads' weekend and AWS weekend, chairman of the queen contest for Junior Weekeend, chairman of King of Hearts selection for the King Hop, a reporter of AWS and has worked on various other committees.

A junior in history, Marie's plans for the future are indefinite. Because of her interest in skiing she hopes to make more trips to ski resorts. She has already been to Sun Valley several times, and has made trips with her family to Canada and all over the United States. In what spare time she manages to muster up, she knits argyles for her brother, Herb.

Also active in her house affairs, Marie has been historian, recording secretary, and marshal of the Delta Delta Delta sorority.

in AWS activities, Marie recently was installed as president of AWS. Next week she is leaving for Albuquerque, New Mexico, to attend the first national convention of AWS at which Oregon has been represented for years. It is a ten-day convention, and Mrs. Wickham, AWS adviser, will accompany Marie. When she returns to the campus, she will be busy with plans for AWS weekend, which is scheduled for April 23.

Besides her AWS activities, Marie is a Phi Theta, secretary-treasurer of AGS, editor of campus personalities for the Oregana, and was

Panhel Elects New Officers

Fran Robson, junior in social science, will wield the gavel as the new president at the next Panhellenic meeting. The executive council will consist of Dorothy Sutton, first vice president; Joanne Frydenlund, second vice president; Joan White, secretary; Mildred Doering, treasurer; Pat McGinty, relations chairman; Dorothy Orr, social chairman; Marjorie Petersen, scholarship chairman; Jackie Morris, publicity chairman; and Margaret Wickenden, standards chairman.

Retiring officers include President Margaret Rauch, Joan Loper, Ann Woodworth, Shirley Lukins, Sue Mercer, Pat Kaiser, and Pat Grimstad.
