

WE'LL GET RACE!

By Chuck Grell

The final shot in the two-year battle for restoration of the Millrace has sounded.

It took approximately two minutes last night for the Eugene city council to accept a report from the Millrace Park Association last night recommending that the council authorize that water flow in the Millrace again.

The association has been instructed by the council to turn over $20,000 in matching funds to the city. The city manager, Oren L. King, will start the ball rolling on plans and specifications for restoration immediately.

The report by the association cited two reasons for the re-installation of water in the race.

1. Three storm sewers feed into the Millrace. The cost of extending these sewers to the Willamette river would be more than the expense of filling the race with water which would carry sewage into the river.

2. The absence of water in the race when sewage is dumped into it presents a dangerous sanitation problem.

Several more easements have been signed within the last few days and more are expected soon.

Kieth Fennell, head of the Millrace Park association, expressed his thanks for the co-operation shown by the city council. He said that the matching funds would be turned over to the City of Eugene as soon as possible.

300 Girls Expected By AWS

Three hundred high school girls will arrive on the campus Friday afternoon for the annual Associated Women Students' weekend, according to Beverly Pitman, past AWS president and chairman of the event.

Highlighting the weekend will be the all-campus vaudeville Friday evening, the nickel hop Saturday evening, and Easter sunrise services Sunday morning. Saturday noon there will be luncheon Gerlinger hall, at which time leaders in women's activities on the campus will be introduced and various phases of University life explained.

Campus tours Saturday and an exchange dinner Sunday will complete the program. The girls, all high school seniors, will be housed in the various women's living organization.

Dr. Cressman Given Award

Dr. L. S. Cressman, head of the anthropology department and director of the museum of natural history, has been awarded a Guggenheim fellowship, according to announcement by Henry Allen Moe, secretary general of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial association.

These fellowships are given annually to assist scholars and artists to carry on work of research and artistic creation. Dr. Cressman's work will include a continuation of the study of the relation of the earliest south-central Oregon cultures to those of adjacent areas.

He began this work in 1940-41 when he received the first Guggenheim fellowship to study cultural material from Oregon caves compared with that from the Southwest. At that time, following his study and visits to museums, Dr. Cressman authored the book "Archaeological Researches in the Northern Great Basin."

Plans for study under the present fellowship including going to Mexico, southwestern states, and possibly central state museums. Dr. Cressman will take a year's leave of absence from the University to do this work, which will begin next September.

Oregana Editors Named Tomorrow

Oregana editor and business manager for 1950 will be named Wednesday night when the educational Activities board interviews applicants. Only petitioner for the editorship is Larry Davidson, Jim Sanders and Harry Panian are seeking the business manager's job. At a meeting the following week the board will interview applicants for Emerald editor and business manager positions.

Deadline for Emerald petitions is April 15.

Here It Is--- Explanation On Spring Vacation

By Gretchen Grondahl

Earl M. Pallett, assistant to the president, cast some light on the shortening of spring vacation up his return to his office yesterday.

At the meeting of the board of deans who approved the change, Pallett submitted three calendars for the academic year 1949-50. The deans voted to adopt the calendar shortening spring vacation to the length of the Thanksgiving holidays "because they believed that it was a better calendar."

"Before, the week of spring vacation threw us in June. This was difficult for the faculty members who teach during both the regular and summer sessions, who had only a few days between the two."

"The new system affords a week's rest between the end of spring term, June 10, and the beginning of summer classes."

Oregon State College's calendar for 1945-50 also provides for June 10 as the end of spring term, but retains the full week of vacation between winter and spring terms.

The Oregon board of deans disapproved of this scheme because it would permit only nine weeks of classes during winter term. The deans believed that the length of the three terms should be equalized as much as possible, Pallett said.

Under Oregon's new calendar, winter term finals next year will begin on Friday, March 17, and end Wednesday, March 22. OSC final week ends on March 18. Both schools resume classes on Monday, March 27.

Weather . . .

Partly cloudy, but there will be little danger of rain. High will be about 64.

Requirements Change...

New BA Program Under Study; Details Worked Out This Week

Proposed changes in the requirements for business administration students have not yet been definitely decided upon, Victor P. Morris, dean of the business school said yesterday.

A staff meeting to work out the details will be held this week.

The change goes into effect next fall term and therefore will not effect those who graduate this June. Adjustments will be made for seniors next year. Dean Morris, in a comment to the Emerald yesterday said:

"I'll have a statement ready by the end of the week of the changes that are going to be involved. The program is not retroactive insofar as juniors and seniors are concerned. Necessary adjustments will be made in all cases."

Federal Civil Service Topic Of Conference

Federal civil service representatives will be on the campus this afternoon for an informal conference with students and faculty. This conference will be similar to the recent meeting with state civil service officials.

A general public meeting open to all students and teachers will be held in Room 3 at 2 p. m. in Fenton hall. Karl W. Onthank, director of the University graduate placement service, will preside.

Arnold Standing, assistant regional forester in charge of personnel at Portland will be the speaker at this session. James P. Cooley, director of the eleventh United States civil service region, will lead the discussion.

Sectional meetings in six different fields will begin at 3 p.m. University faculty members will preside over these groups, and the Federal representatives will discuss the opportunities in their specialized fields.

Opportunities for student interviews will be available after the discussion sessions.

Meeting Schedule

The sectional meeting schedule follows:

"ECONOMICS" (8 Commerce). Calvin Crumbaker, head of the department of economics, presiding. Bernard Goldhamer, former professor at the University of

IRC to Discuss Atlantic Pact

Pros and cons of the North Atlantic Security Pact will be aired in a four-man debate at tonight's International Relations club meeting, 7:30 p.m. in Westminster house.

Speaking for the pact will be Hugh Smith of the law school and Lester Peterson, junior in pre-law. Against the Security pact will be Charles P. Schleicher, professor of political science, and Walter Dodd, graduate student in political science.

Glenn Morgan, IRC president, said "The Atlantic pact is one of the big issues of today. This debate should bring out most of the arguments for and against it . . . and I believe it will be worth hearing."

WSSF Vodvil Ductas On Sale Today In Co-op

With only four days remaining before the lifting of the curtain on Friday's All-Campus Vodvil show, preparations are rolling ahead on all fronts.

Ticket sales begin in the Co-op today, and continue in living organizations. The Co-op booth, manned today by Tri Delt freshmen, will be open from 10 to 5.

"We expect an especially large sale in women's organizations, because they will want to buy tickets for their high school guests here for AWS weekend," Ed Peterson, campus sales chairman, said yesterday.

"The Vodvil will give them a taste of campus talent and fun, as well as showing them that the University can get behind a worthy cause."

All proceeds of the Vodvil will go to the World Student Service fund, an organization serving students in war-devastated countries. The regular WSSF fund-raising drive, held during the winter term, fell far short of the expected response.

Peterson credited his assistants, Diane Ford, Donna Gattton, and Bob Knollin, with distributing the tickets to living organizations last week.

Competition for the three permanent trophies and the trip to Reno runs high in campus living and church organizations. The first round of eliminations took place last night, with the remaining half scheduled to try out at Gerlinger Annex tonight. Finalists eligible to compete in Friday's performance will be announced in tomorrow's Emerald.

"The general enthusiasm of the entries has been excellent," Velma Snellstrom, program chairman, commented yesterday.

"Many of the acts are using original costuming and making their own props, such as paper trees. Not all of them are direct vaudeville material, but that is perfectly permissible."

Tonight's eliminations schedule: Hendricks hall, Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Kappa Gamma,
