more whirlpool tank this summer, this one large enough to treat the whole body.

IN THE WAY of lamps, there is a 1500 Watt radiant which is used for top surface treatment, and four infra-reds, all of which are controlled by automatic timers. The training room also harbors an ultra violet lamp which clears fungus and skin disorders.

One of the most effective gadgets in the room is a 1,000 dollar electric short-wave diathermy machine which operates through a pair of pads or clamps. The pads are placed around the arm, for example, and the rays, attracting each other, go through the arm, thus treating sore spots that have worked below the surface.

FOOTBALL SEASON has proved to be exceptionally busy for the training room staff. The first four teams get their ankles taped before a home game. That means 44 men—which in turn means 88 ankles.

Grid coach Jim Aiken insists that each man tape his ankles before a game; at least partially as a result of this, there hasn't been an Oregon griddle out with a bad ankle in two years.

Some coaches make the taped ankle an optional move on the part of the player—and Oregon State can attest to the not-too-sound wisdom of that policy.

Student Committee Petitions Asked

A new student body committee is being organized to handle foreign student problems and correspondence coming to the University of Oregon, according to Amy Lou Ware, chairman.

"Letters from students in Germany, Finland, Norway, and the Philippines are waiting to be answered," Miss Ware said, stressing the importance of such work to international relations.

Students interested in working on such a committee are asked to submit petitions to Miss Ware at the Delta Gamma house.
