

Aesthetics Conference Closes; Large Student Attendance Noted

Delegates to the annual meeting of the west coast division of the American Society for Aesthetics closed their conference here Saturday with the general conclusion that the getting together of critics of art, philosophy, and drama brings mutual profit through the discussion and evaluation of controversial ideas.

A better understanding in the total community of the arts was attempted, according to Bertram E. Jessup of the University philosophy department, who arranged the conference.

Jessup said the society was particularly impressed by the unusually large degree of student attendance at the sessions. Delegates were also highly appreciative of special presentations arranged by the school of music, the school of art, and the drama department.

University of Rangoon Position In Anthropology Offered Barnett

H. G. Barnett, associate professor of anthropology, received last week an offer of a position on the faculty of the University of Rangoon, Burma.

The offer, coming through the committee on International Exchange of Persons of the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils, is a part of the Fulbright Program of the state department. Under this plan Dr. Barnett would spend one year in Burma and would hold a visiting professorship in anthropology.

Dr. Barnett will be unable to accept the position because L. S. Cressman, head of the department there, will be on a leave of absence next year.

The letter Dr. Barnett received said this would be the first time instruction in anthropology would be offered in Burma.
