

Millrace Campaign Dates Set

June 6-12 Announced As Tentative Days For All-City Drive

Final all-city drive for millrace funds has been tentatively scheduled for June 6-12, according to Bill Tugman of the Eugene Register-Guard, who will head the campaign.

"We are not yet fully organized," stated Tugman, "but the quota for the drive has been set for $15,000. The millrace association needs about $6,000, with the rest going to the Gateways association."

Tugman further explained that the millrace group may not need all $6,000 if the University alumni make good their $4500 pledge.

"However, we thought it would be best to get the cash on hand and start the work on restoration. In case the alumni do contribute, some of the funds donated by University students would be turned back, possibly to be used for student millrace developments."

Student Funds for Millrace

No student money whatever is being used for the Gateways development, according to Tugman.

"I've heard that some students have been under the impression that their breakage fee pledges are being used for the Gateways project as well as millrace work," he said. "This is not true."

"The Gateways association will use funds from the coming drive, as well as aid from the state highway department." The highway department will landscape both sides of the highway from Walnut Street east.

June 15 Deadline

June 15 has been set as the deadline for the accumulation of funds for both projects.

"My information is that engineering work is proceeding on the project," said Tugman. "As soon as the engineering is done and the funds collected, contracts will be let for the work."

"The students have done their part—we'll do ours."

Meanwhile, the city council of Eugene has announced that four acres of land have been purchased at the head of millrace for conversion into public land.

All men's living organizations will be warned of the approaching day next week.

The music of Ike Carpenter, who is scheduled to play for the ball, will be featured on records at the Co-op between classes next Wednesday.

Restrictions on University men students during the annual Ladies' Day slated for next Thursday, June 2, were announced yesterday by Mortar Board ball promotion chairman Jordis Benke.

Honoraries Will Aid Committee In Classrooms

Members of the faculty rating committee are meeting this week with Phi Theta Upsilon, Alpha Phi Omega, and Druids to instruct members of the service honoraries in the administration of the faculty rating forms. A picked group of senior men will also aid the committee.

A meeting will be held next Tuesday at 4 p.m. in 207 Chapman for all members of the honoraries. The rating committee will pass out procedure sheets and give last minute instructions. It is imperative that all members be present.

The rating forms will be passed out during the first part of the hour in all classes on June 1 and 2. Laura Olson, committee chairman explained that if a course is not rated it is because the professor did not request it.

Any professor who wishes to be rated and is not sure that he is signed up is asked to submit the time and place of his classes and the number of students in them to the ASUO president's office in Emerald hall immediately.

Classes which meet on both Wednesday and Thursday will be rated on Thursday.

The rating is voluntary and only the professor will see his own rating. The envelopes containing the ratings will be kept by the committee and returned to the professor after his finals have been given. A letter attached to each envelope will ask the professor for his criticism of the questions and procedure for the guidance of next year's committee.

Headquarters during June 1 and 2 will be in the Old Oregon offices in Friendly hall. Those helping with the rating are asked to enter the offices through the door facing the parking lot.

Members of the committee, who are working under the auspices of the ASUO executive council, are Laura Olson, chairman, Shirley Lukins, Olga Yevtich, Trudi Chernis, Bobolee Brophy, Warren Webster, Herb Kariel, and Bob Goffard. The rating is being partially financed through a $100 donation from the senior class.

Sig Eps Finish $1000 Pledge Made in 1947

Payment was completed Wednesday on a pledge of $1000 to the student union just two years after it was made in May 1947, by Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. Each member of the Sig Eps assessed himself $1 per month during this period to make completion possible at this time.

William S. Barnum, president at the time the pledge was made, Francis L. Mahula, who "saw that the payments were kept up," and James A. Snell, this year's SPE president, gathered Wednesday afternoon to present the check formally to Dick Williams, student union director.

The Sigma Phi Epsilon memorial, the furnishing of a room in the union, will be dedicated to Ehle H. Reber, Hugh O. Hoffman, Alfred N. Nysteen, Loyal B. Hopkins, Jr., Burton H. Osburn, Jr., and Ken Lottridge—Sig Eps who were killed during World War II.

More Money Needed For Oregana Mailing

Students living outside of Eugene or Portland will have an opportunity to pay mailing fees for their 1949 Oreganas June 6 and 7, the business staff announced yesterday. Mail distribution for the books has been necessitated by a printers' strike in Portland.

Eugene and Portland students will be able to pick up their books at centrally located distribution points.

Druids Elect New President

Jim Hershner, SAE, was elected president of Druids, junior men's honorary, last night at the group's first meeting in the ATO house. Jerry Smith, Fiji, was elected vice-president, and Jim Stanley, Beta, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

Outgoing President Warren Davis explained the duties of Druids in serving the University.

Hershner, new president, served last year as secretary to Skull and Dagger, sophomore men's honorary.

The Show-off Himself Fred Schneider's Life Follows Script

By Barbara Holland

"Coincidence can go too far!" exclaimed Fred Schneider, who portrays the Show-off in the University theater production of the same name which opens on the Guild theater stage.

Fred explained that he has been living his part of Aubrey Piper in an almost alarmingly realistic fashion.

"First," he said, "the plot calls for Aubrey to play the ukelele—and strumming a uke is one of my hobbies."

"Now, that isn't too unusual," he continued, "but there's more."

"Aubrey is a very vain fellow and wears a wig because he is almost bald. Well—"

Fred went on to relate that since he has recently planted his pin, he was due for a little trip to the Delta Zeta house, courtesy of his Delta fraternity brothers. When the appointed hour arrived, however, Fred was nowhere to be found.

Meanwhile, the cast and crew of "The Show-Off," assembled for rehearsal, were amazed to see a young Amazon, clothed in a bandana and a long coat and looking much like 6 foot 2 inch of lady coal miner, stealthily enter the theater. The rehearsal proceeded as usual that night—the cast was complete.

But revenge came, as it must—in the form of a pig shave, which rendered Fred even more like Aubrey Piper than he had been before.

"As if that weren't enough," Fred sighed, "I had the first auto accident of my life last week."

"In the play, Aubrey runs down a traffic policeman and a trolley car in a borrowed automobile. Of course, I didn't go that far," he added, grinning.

There is one encouraging aspect about the situation, though. At the show's finale, Aubrey has just swung a big business deal and has raked in $100,000. Maybe coincidence isn't so bad!

Show business is nothing new for Fred, who made his first public appearance as a tap dancer at the age of four.

"I progressed from that to a dramatic role in 'The Three Little Pigs' in grammar school," Fred said, "and since then, entertaining has been a part of my life."

Owners of the books will have to pay the postage, as agreed on the order cards signed: "that if the 1949 Oregana cannot be delivered on the campus due to circumstances beyond the control of either party to this contract, the book will be mailed (POSTAGE COLLECT) to the home address listed."

Since it has been discovered that sending the books by prepaid parcel post will save from 25 to 35 cents in COD fees, students will be asked to leave their correct mailing addresses at Johnson hall and at the same time pay their parcel post fee. They may thus receive their books without further payment when they are mailed out of Eugene.

The following parcel post rates apply for the seven pounds of Oregana and mailing cover: local, 16c; zones 1 and 2, up to 150 miles, 25c; zone 3, 150 to 300 miles, 31c; zone 4, 300 to 600 miles, 41c; zone 5, 600 to 1000 miles, 51c; zone 6, 1000 to 1400 miles, 61c; zone 7, 1400-1800 miles, 74c; and zone 8, over 1800 miles, 87c.

Most of Oregon is included in zones 1, 2, and 3; most of Idaho is in zone 4. Washington and California are in zones 3, 4, and 5; most of Nevada is in zone 4, and all areas east of Illinois are in zone 8.

Student Union Fire Draws Many; Building Then Given Once-Over

A small fire in a Student Union tool shed last night occasioned a mass sight-seeing tour of the semi-completed Union building by several hundred students.

Sirens called the students from their books at about 7:30 p.m. when a tool chest in one of the small storage buildings caught fire.

The flames were extinguished before they could spread to oil barrels store outside the shed, and the mob of onlookers drifted into the Student Union to pass on the plumbing fixtures and to inspect the quality of construction.

Damages sustained in the fire were one pair of overalls with money in the pockets, and the tool chest.
