

Faculty Senate Workings Told; Group Speeds General Meetings

By Barbara Jeremiah

Ever stop to wonder who decided there should be a one-hour course in camp cookery?

Chances are that the Faculty senate put its okay on the idea way back when. This ever-functioning, though unsung, group is composed of two faculty representatives and the dean from each school in the University, except for the college of liberal arts which sends nine spokesmen.

Elected by their fellow teachers, these "congressmen" meet one week before the monthly faculty meeting to discuss questions scheduled to come up at that time.

MATTERS DISCUSSED

Business items, the advisability of adding new courses, whether or not veterans shall be required to take PE or candidates for master of arts degrees shall be required to write theses, and other policy changes are threshed out on the senate floor before being submitted with a stamp of approval or disapproval.

A "no" vote by the senate is not considered a kiss of death, however. It is fairly common for the faculty to reverse these preliminary decisions. Although usually just discussed, some issues may call for special reports and committees are appointed.

Heads of departments or their representatives are often invited to plead their cases.

MEMBERS LISTED

R. W. Leighton, dean of the school of health and physical education, is senate chairman. W. C. Price, associate professor of journalism, is vice-chairman, and P. R. Washke, professor of physical education, is secretary.

Chemical Society Sponsors Film

The American Chemical Society student affiliate on campus Monday will sponsor the film "Glass for Science" to be shown at 4 p.m. in Chapman Hall.

The technicolor film, open to the public, produced by Corning Glassware Co., illustrates the making of laboratory glassware, both machine worker and handblown.

The affiliate was chartered last spring and organized this fall to serve the interests of undergraduate and graduate students interested in chemistry.

In addition to the film, the group plans to sponsor other relevant films and speakers, promote interest in chemistry and provide social affairs for its members. The affiliate program is a nation-wide one sponsored by the American Chemical Society.

YM Freshmen Hear Foskett On Vocations

"If I were a Freshman, and had not fully decided about my vocational choice, I would not be concerned about it," said John Foskett of the University Sociology Department in his speech to the members of the Freshman Club at the YMCA Thursday evening.

Find some field of study you enjoy; then when formal education is completed, and you can do something well, you will find a job," he stated.

Foskett declared that many students have misconceptions of the University. One of these misconceptions is that the University is a "mill" which turns out graduates, giving the student no chance to have personal contact with faculty members. Foskett said that this is not true; and that faculty members are glad to have students drop in to discuss their course.

Another misconception common among freshman students, he said, is the idea that in order to succeed, a student must be either a bookworm or a playboy. Foskett feels the student should try to maintain a balance between the two if he wishes to have a successful college career.

The Freshman Club will hold its next meeting at the "Y" on Oct. 13 at 7:30. The speaker for the evening will be student body president Art Johnson who will speak on the subject, "Making Good in Student Activities."

Prison Reform, Gridiron Outlook Explained in October Old Oregon

"Reform . . . Not Punishment" by Pat Arrowsmith, sophomore, is one of the lead articles in the October issue of Old Oregon, alumni magazine of the University. The account of Dr. Miriam Van Waters, Oregon, 1908, deals with her courageous fight to retain her position as superintendent of the Framingham reformatory for women in Massachusetts.

Dr. Van Waters, who is nationally known for her record of prison reform, was accused of allowing the inmates too much freedom after the suicide-hanging of a young woman in the reformatory. Her trial and her attempt to better the conditions in the prison are recounted in Old Oregon.

"The Gridiron Outlook," a pair of articles by Fred Taylor, associate editor of the Emerald, discloses the opinions of two of Oregon's outstanding football team members on the Webfoots' conference chances for this season. The first article is about Bill Fell, promising new halfback who came to Oregon this year from Compton Junior College, and why he chose Oregon. The second recounts an interview with George Bell, right halfback.

A page of scenes connected with last spring's extravaganza production of "Marco Millions" is used to illustrate an article by Larry Davidson, describing the new theaters in Villard Hall.

Jo Gilbert traces three University of Oregon professors into very active retirement with a story about Dr. Louis A. Wood of the economics department, Fred L. Stetson, professor of education for the past 33 years, and Dr. Albert E. Caswell, former head of the physics department.

The November issue of Old Oregon will feature in story and pictures the new buildings on campus, and Homecoming.

Today Last Chance For Athletic Cards

Today is the last day that athletic cards can be obtained, according to an announcement from the Athletic Ticket Office.

These cards may be obtained by presenting registration cards at the athletic ticket window in Mac Court. The office is open from 8 a.m. until noon on Saturday.

Russian Film Set Thursday

"Report from Russia," a film made recently by the Office of War Information, will be shown at 3 p.m., next Thursday in Room 20, Friendly Hall.

The idea expressed in the movie is that Russia's secret strength, after all propaganda elements have been removed, is still in the unity of the Russian people.

No admission will be charged for the movie, sponsored by the Russian Club.

Talk Scheduled By Schleicher

Dr. Charles P. Schleicher, professor of political science, will speak to University foreign students at their orientation meetings on Monday and Wednesday nights from 4 to 5 in the men's lounge of Gerlinger Hall.

Phases of political science that would be of special interest to foreign students will be the subject of his talk.

Visitors are welcome to attend the meeting if they first notify J. D. Kline, foreign student adviser, at his office in Emerald Hall.

Orientation meetings are held for foreign students every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday night. On Friday nights a discussion of material presented on Monday and Wednesday is held.

Retreat Planned

The Reverend Thom Hunter, director of Westminster House, announced Friday that the bus transporting students to the retreat will leave Westminster House at 1 p.m. today.

Interested students may contact Reverend Hunter or Bob Stephensen at 1414 Kincaid or phone 4-4143. The retreat will be held at Smith Creek Camp, 18 miles east of Salem.

Glossy Sale to End

Today is the last day of the glossy sale. These are pictures left from last year's Oregana. There are a few sport pictures, senior prints, activity and contest pictures.
