

YW Sponsors Gift Collection

Christmas gift collection boxes are now in the YWCA, Orides room in Gerlinger, and the Community Center downtown as the drive for cheering foreign students' families gets under way.

Living organizations and individual students may contribute items to the drive, sponsored by the YWCA International Affairs committee.

Deadline for donations is Nov. 15.

Arrangements for contributing certain items may be made by contacting chairmen Pat Williams Brooks at the YWCA, or Delores Jeppesen, at 5-3434 after 5 p.m.

Foreign students attending the University have turned in lists of gifts which they would like to send to their families overseas, but which their limited scholarship funds will not permit them to purchase.

Items from nylons to flower bulbs are included on the lists, with emphasis on food and wearing apparel.

Seniors, Graduates Eligible for Grants

Students graduating this spring may apply now for Henry Fellowships to Oxford or Cambridge University in England.

Applications for the Fellowships must be submitted to the Office of the Secretary of Yale University or to the Secretary to the Corporation of Harvard University, trustees of the fund stated.

The Fellowships provide grants of 600 pounds ($1680, at present rate of exchange) to five American students for a year of study in England. Both men and women are eligible to apply.

Employees Set Up Branch Association

Civil Service employees set up a temporary organization for a campus branch of the Oregon State Employees Association Tuesday night.

Mrs. Dora Churchman was named temporary chairman of the group. Acting secretary-treasurer will be Mrs. Sylvia Harkness.

Approximately 35 were present at the meeting at which Forrest Stewart, executive secretary of OSEA presided. The next meeting of the campus chapter has been set for Nov. 21. All Civil Service employees of the University are invited.

KOAC to Present 'Macbeth' Dec. 3

An hour presentation of "Macbeth," will be presented over KOAC on Dec. 3, in conjunction with a University-wide program commemorating the 1949-50 building program.

Casting and rehearsals will be held each Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the studios at 3 p.m.

A large cast will be needed for the Shakespeare play, which will be the most ambitious undertaking ever attempted by the radio division. Those interested may attend regardless of experience or major interest.

Wallace Appointed Circulation Manager

Bruce Wallace, junior in business administration, has been appointed General Circulation Manager of the 1950 Oregon by Business Manager Jim Sanders.

Wallace has worked on sales and living organization work this term for the 1950 book, and has been in charge of the late sales campaign in the ten veterans' dormitories. Glen Allen, senior in business administration, appointed to the circulation manager's job earlier this fall has dropped from school for the remainder of the term.

National Officer To Visit Honorary

Phi Chi Theta, business women's honorary, will be inspected today by Miss Lila Gail Campbell, first national vice president of the organization.

Miss Campbell, who will arrive from Corvallis today at 2 p.m., inspects business and financial practices in Phi Chi Theta chapters all over the West.

After attending an afternoon tea at Hendricks Hall, Miss Campbell will examine the business procedures of Beta chapter at a regular business meeting of the organization today at 4:30 in Hendricks Hall.

Formal pledging of future Phi Chi Theta members tonight at 6:30 in the Alpha Xi Delta house will conclude Miss Campbell's inspection of the chapter. Women to be pledged are Janet Swint, Virginia Drake, Frances Lowry, Shirley Wilson, Betty Jo Carlton, Yvonne Strine, Donna Bernhardt, and Barbara McBea.

Miss Campbell will leave for Portland Friday afternoon after conferences with Victor P. Morris, dean of business administration, and Mrs. Golda Wickham, director of women's affairs.

They Want Good Stuff

Style, Quality Important To Most Student Buyers

By Phil Wolcott

Oregon students buy quality goods.

That's the opinion expressed by campus merchants in a recent store-to-store canvass by The Emerald.

"They want real quality. Contrary to popular belief, students don't want gaudy stuff," one clothing store owner stated.

Nationally advertised goods are popular among Oregonites, according to another merchant.

"They look for good prices, but once they make up their minds they will pay almost any price," was the comment of a men's shop manager.

"Student clothing customers are more selective than the average buyer and want up-to-the-minute styling," he said. "However, their tastes are more on the conservative side and they don't like excessive colors to achieve style."

Another business man declared that "the average male student likes different type clothes than most buyers." They like snappy suits, extreme cuts, and looser fitting clothes. Most campus men will buy a larger size article than you are."

Most merchants agreed that summer school students, mostly teachers, are less extravagant than the average regular-session student. The teacher-students buy only bare necessities and indulge in bargain hunting more than undergraduates.

A pharmacist complained that his customers from the campus were far healthier than most prescription buyers, but a shoe repairman was quite satisfied that students were so "young and healthy" because they wear their shoes out faster.

The consensus was that student business averages anywhere from 50 to 65 per cent in campus establishments, with extremes from 30 to 90 per cent. Restaurants were highest in University business.

Summer school trade drops to an average of 30 per cent of the total in most business houses. Many eating establishments close during the summer slack period.

When asked about student customer's behavior, a drugstore proprietor summed up the general opinion with, "A college student is a college student, no matter where their downtown counterpart."

'Shop Talk' Set For Journalists

A "shop talk" to acquaint prospective journalists with methods of working harmoniously with the mechanical department of a newspaper will be presented Sunday at 4 in 105 Journalism under the sponsorship of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity.

Barney Shaw, University Press shop foreman, and Nick Cavagnaro, night compositor and Emerald make-up man, will present the "back shop's" viewpoint in an informal discussion with the students.

All interested students are invited to attend the discussion. Refreshments will be served.

"Ivan the Terrible" On Screen Dec. 6

"Ivan the Terrible," a Russian film, will be shown in 207 Chapman, Dec. 6.

Starring Nikolai Cherkassov as the awe-inspiring Czar Ivan IV, and directed by S. Eisenstein, the movie was produced in Russia in 1947. Dialogue is in Russian with English subtitles.

Sets and lighting in "Ivan the Terrible" have been used to produce the sense of horror appropriate to the story. The use of sounds builds an oppressive atmosphere.

Sponsored on the University campus by the Russian club, admission charge will be 25 cents.

Lose Your Specs? Pair Found in Cafe
