

Students, Faculty Work Together on Committees

By GRETCHEN GRONDAHL

(Editor's note: This is the second in a series of articles on student government at the University.)

Membership on student-faculty committees gives student body representatives a voice in determining discipline, student affairs, assemblies and military education, besides their direct control over activities exercised through the Executive Council.

Oregon is the only state school in the Northwest with student representation on its disciplinary committee. Jurisdiction is exercised by this group over such student problems as cheating, falsification of records, and unbecoming conduct.

Student members of the committee are Jim Snell, Anne Case, and Glenn Allen, who has withdrawn from school but is not replaced yet.

Faculty representatives are R. D. Clark, Jessie M. Smith, N. H. Oswald, W. C. Price, H. R. Taylor, and ex-officio members Vergil S. Fogdall and Golda Wickham.

Student Affairs are handled by a joint committee of student representatives—Art Johnson, ASUO President, Dorothy Orr, Heads of Houses prexy, Marie Lombard, Associated Women Students head,

Johnson Writes Article for Mag

Eldon L. Johnson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, is the author of "Consent of the Governed," an article appearing in the autumn issue of Pacific Spectator, a quarterly journal of the humanities.

This is Mr. Johnson's second article to appear in the magazine. His first contribution was "Government by Habit" in the autumn, 1947 issue.

Pacific Spectator is sponsored by 27 West Coast colleges and universities.

Mr. Johnson, a graduate of Indiana State Teacher's College, has taught at the University of Wisconsin and in high schools in Indiana and Wisconsin. He served as national academic director of the Army Air Forces Pre-meteorological training programs, and from 1942 to 1943 edited Personnel Administration.

He was director of the graduate school of the United States department of Agriculture until he came to Oregon in 1945.

Oregon Students Heard on KOAC

A half-hour program from the School of Music featuring Madelon Alder pianist and Bob M. Roberts, baritone; was heard last night over station KOAC.

Miss Alder, a sophomore in Music, has given numerous recitals over KOAC and throughout the state. Her selections last night were three movements of "Poems of the Sea," by Ernest Bloch.

Roberts, a veteran of many KOAC dramatic shows, presented three groups of selections. The first was "Fussreise und Verbogenheit" by Hugo Wolf.

Following this, he turned to the two modern American composers. "Knock on the Door," and "And So Goodbye," by Bainbridge Crist, and "Captain Stratton's Fancy" by Deems Taylor were his concluding selections.

Plays to Start On December 2

The University Theater plans five productions in the new Theater Building starting Dec. 2 with Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset," according to Horace W. Robinson, director.

"Winterset" will run Dec. 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, and 10. The box office will open Nov. 28 and season ticket holders will make reservations earlier.

Other plays of the season include:

Julian Thompson's "The Warrior Husband," starting Mar. 3.

Flotow's "Martha," which begins Apr. 21.

David Belasco's "The Girl I Left Behind Me," May 26.

The second play of the season which will open Feb. 3 will be announced later this week.

Marguerite Johns Interviewed on Air

Homecoming Hostess, Marguerite Johns, and members of the Homecoming Dance posters and radio promotion committee were informally interviewed Monday between 11 and 12 midnight by Don Porter on his "Swing Soiree" over radio station KUGN.

Students heard were Tom Barry, committee chairman, Delores Kletzing, Ann Gillenwater, Marjorie Fulton, Jane Cover, and Anona Freeman.

'Senior Six' Chosen For Phi Beta Kappa

"Senior Six" of the class of 1950 were elected by Phi Beta Kappa, national liberal arts and science honorary, Monday afternoon.

SIX NAMED

Outstanding seniors designated for membership in Phi Beta Kappa are Joan Mimnaugh, English; Eugene Maier, mathematics; Eleanor Ribbans, sociology; Jack Lawson, English; Stanley Pierson, history; and James A. Sanders, history.

Elected by ballot of all active members in the campus chapter, the "Senior Six" were judged on leadership, character, and diversification of studies, as well as high scholastic achievement.

Notices of their election will be sent to the new members today, Mrs. Andrew Moursund, secretary, said.
