

Vets Need VA Assent For Care

The Veterans Administration Monday reminded service-connected disabled veterans seeking home-town medical care that they must first obtain approval from the nearest VA regional office if they expect the Administration to finance such treatment.

An increasing number of claims for reimbursement have come to the VA board of appeals from veterans who failed to obtain VA approval before going to home-town physicians for treatment.

MANY CLAIMS DISALLOWED

The claims have been disallowed except in those cases where it was found that emergency treatment for a service-connected disability was necessary.

Even in emergency cases, the VA emphasized, it is necessary to receive regional office approval. However, some leeway is allowed for requesting approval in such cases.

Veterans hospitalized for emergency treatment with a service-connected disability are required to request approval within 72 hours after hospitalization.

OUT-PATIENT TREATMENT

Those given treatment on an out-patient basis must have their request in writing at the regional office within 15 days after treatment is begun.

Approval cannot be given on either emergency or non-emergency request for home-town medical treatment if a VA hospital or out-patient clinic is "feasibly available," the Administration said.

Non-service-connected cases are not eligible for home-town medical care under the law.

Equitable Administration Class Opens for Senior Enrollment

Applications for enrollment in the Equitable Life Assurance Society's 1950 class in administrative training are now being accepted from college seniors, according to information received from the Society.

Purpose of the training course is to select, employ and train young men for administrative and supervisory positions in branch and the home office.

INITIAL TRAINING

Initial training is the same for all students, but members of the class may develop interest in specialized fields, such as auditing, claims, investments, real estate, group insurance, and sales or branch office management.

Completion of the course requires approximately 10 months. Students are then assigned to regular positions with the Society.

Salary during the training period is $200 a month and a liberal increase is granted upon assignment to regular duty. Individual capabilities and available opportunities thereafter determine progress.

QUALIFICATIONS LISTED

Kline Announces Applications Due For Fulbright Aid

Deadline for submitting applications for Fulbright foreign study scholarships is 12 midnight Nov. 30, James D. Kline, assistant registrar, reminded Monday.

Students who do not have their applications in Kline's hands by that time will be automatically disqualified. References must also be submitted to Kline by the same hour.

As yet, no completed forms have been received by the Office of the Registrar. Kline states he has reason to believe that some of the award winners will be selected from the University, even though the scholarships are awarded on a national basis.

Seniors, graduate students, and faculty members are eligible for the awards.

Fulbright scholarships provide traveling expenses to and from the foreign country in which students will study, total living expenses, and educational costs.

You can help lock the door against cancer

This is a story about a door and two keys. The story will have more point if, first, we state three facts:

- Every 3 minutes an American dies of cancer.
- 25% of those who die could have been saved.
- Many cancers can be cured—if detected in time.

Now here is the story. A door can be built to repel this deadly killer, but the door locks only if two keys are turned. Science holds one key. Your money can provide the other.

Your dollars support cancer research which some day may find the causes and cure of the disease. Your money supports an education program that teaches men and women how to recognize cancer in its early stages, when immediate treatment can save their lives.

Won't you help us lock the door? Give as generously as you can. Give more than before. Give to guard those you love.
