

Peace by Power Illusion, Warns News Analyst

Peace by power has become an illusion, Raymond Swing, news analyst and former radio commentator, declared before a capacity audience at Eugene High School auditorium Tuesday night.

Speaking on the topic "History on the March," he continued that "War won by brutality cannot bring enduring peace."

Swing, who is vice president of the World Federalist movement believes that the danger of future wars will have diminished when we have accepted world government. His lecture was based on his recent tour of Europe.

MUST CONVINCe SELVES

"We must first convince ourselves that we want world government, and secondly must convince the world that it needs it," he said. "If we believe in peace and work for it, then surely our children will live to enjoy it."

Swing noted four alarming changes which have occurred in the last year: 1. Russia has the A-bomb; 2. The collapse of nationalist China; 3. We have learned that the Marshall plan is going to fail; 4. The rebirth of nationalist Germany.

All these points have catastrophic possibilities, the speaker stated. However, he listed some more hopeful points:

HOPEFUL POINTS SEEN

First is the meeting of the Council of Europe, which might be a start of world federation. Secondly, Swing called the Atlantic Pact the worst set-back to Soviet power since the end of the war. Other promising aspects of world conditions are the birth of Israel and of independent Indonesia.

Under the Atlantic Pact, Swing said, the West must keep Russia from overrunning Europe. Although the Pact calls for only 40 divisions to safeguard peace, Russia now has 175 in Europe, with prospects of 400 in a few months. "We cannot place any reliance on the French," he pointed out, "because too many French are pro-Communist. We must back up the French with armored divisions of our own."

Pianist

GRANT JOHANNESSEN

Young Musician Wins Acclaim As Piano Artist

Last Eugene and University Civic Music Association concert of this term, featuring Grant Johannesen at the piano, will be held tonight at 8 in McArthur Court.

Johannesen, who has been performing as a concert artist for only five years, is a protege of French Pianist Robert Casadesu. Since his New York debut in 1944, the young pianist has made successful tours of North America and Europe.

'DON'T SHOOT'

He is the first pianist to have toured in Northern Alaska, where he shared the stage with a sign admonishing, "Don't shoot the pianist—he's doing the best he can."

More recently, Johannesen was awarded first prize at the International Piano Festival held at Ostende, Belgium. Johannesen is the first American pianist to receive this prize, sponsored by the Belgian government.

FIRST STOP HERE

Eugene is the first stop of the young pianist's 1949 American tour, which will carry him to New York, Boston, San Francisco, Chicago, and Philadelphia. Later he will tour France, Italy, Belgium and Holland.

Johannesen's appearances in this country have drawn widespread acclaim from the press. "Poetic" was the New York Post's evaluation of his performance; the New York Herald Tribune called him "Among the foremost pianists of his generation."

APPEARS ABROAD

Prior to his arrival in the United States earlier this month, the pianist appeared in a series of recitals in Lyon, Marseille, Brussels, Florence, Milan, and Venice. He was soloist at the Beethoven Festival in Paris, playing with the Lamoureux Orchestra.

Rehearsal Pace Quickens As 'Winterset' Date Nears

Noted Reporter To Talk at U.O.

The "Richfield Reporter," John Wald, Thursday will give three talks at the University concerning radio newswriting.

The nationally known newscaster will speak at 3 p.m. in 105 McClure and at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. in 104 Villard.

Wald, who arrived last night from Los Angeles, is visiting the city in observance of "Richfield Week." He will go on the air tonight at 8 over KUGN and Thursday night at 10 from the Eugene Hotel.

Raymond Johnson, instructor in journalism, made the arrangements for Wald's appearances. The program is sponsored by the school of journalism and Sigma Delta Chi, men's journalism fraternity.

With the formal opening of "Winterset" approaching Friday, the cast and crew of the University Theater's first production this year are quickening their schedule of activities and rehearsals.

One side of the stage in the new theater building has been turned into a tenement house, while facing it is the base of a large metropolitan bridge. Alternating with this setting is the basement apartment of old Rabbi Esdras and his family.

With a large crew of stage hands to make the changes, technical director William E. Schlosser is able to transform the scene from the riverbank to the Esdras apartment in record time. To speed the changes, the interior set is mounted on a moving base, which can be quickly pushed into position.

Using these two sets, Director Horace W. Robinson and his cast are able to produce Maxwell Anderson's play with a minimum of technical limitations. The scenes in the poetic tragedy vary from a tender love scene and a spontaneous street dance to murder by the banks of the river.

Featured in the large cast are Gordon Erickson and Barbara Pasquan as the lovers, Mio and Miriamme; Terrance Roseen as Trock, the gangster; Paul Wexler as Rabbi Esdras, with Richard Walker as his son Garth. Cliff James plays Judge Gaunt and Richard Bentz plays Carr. Fred Schneider is Shadow.

Women Hold Purse Strings in City Say J. C. Penney Student Managers

It's a woman's world, 15 student managers decided Tuesday when they assumed the managerial positions of J. C. Penney's Eugene store for a day.

Even in men's clothing the majority of customers are women, said Kenneth Hansen, acting section manager, who was one of the 15 retail merchandising students participating in the project. Most feminine trade was in accessories, especially neckties, he explained.

The excursion, arranged by Prof. N. H. Comish, professor of business administration, and Calvin Smith, manager of J. C. Penney's, was designed to provide actual experience to supplement studies in retail merchandising.

"The project was an excellent opportunity for the students to practice the principles and procedures which they learn in class," Frank Hale, student general manager, commented.

"It shows the practical attitude of Prof. Comish in preparing students of the field of business."

Most of the students spent part of the day meeting customers in sales transactions. Most active manager was Donald Van Zyle, manager of the downstairs store, who supervised the sale of over 1,000 yards of plastic goods. Other major sales included a man's suit and lady's coat.

Students were acquainted with their positions before 9:30 a.m.

when the store opened. Each guest manager was sponsored by the permanent manager of that department, who explained the functions and practices of the position.

At an afternoon session, the students surveyed the store's system of merchandise buying. "The whole system is geared to the wants of the customer," Hale explained. "Every type of merchandise is purchased to meet the present taste of the public."

Regarding public relations of the company, Hale commented on the friendly atmosphere of the store, emphasizing the personal interest which the permanent staff members showed in the students and the project.
