tasting, cooler smoking," "Lucky Strike means fine tobacco," and other equally arresting. The "T-zone" would become a thing of no concern; athletes would die on the vine.

Of course there are always some die-hards. Riis tells of Buerger's disease, characterized by such loss of circulation in the hands and feet that amputation is in rare cases necessary. It occurs almost entirely among smokers; if they quit the symptoms usually cease.

One Buerger's sufferer was told to choose between quitting smoking or progressive amputation of his hands or feet. A few years later one of his doctors saw the patient on the street, an armless and legless beggar.

"Hey doc," he said, "be a good scout and light a cigarette and stick it in my mouth for me, will ya?"

Smoke, smoke, smoke that cigarette!
