String Quartet On KOAC Tonight

The University String Quartet will present their first program of the quarter over KOAC at 6:15 today. The group consists of Edmund A. Cykler, viola; Milton Dieterich, cello; George Boughton, violin; and Stacy Green, piano. All are members of the School of Music faculty.

"Quartet for piano, violin, viola and cello" is to be the featured composition of the half hour recital. It was composed in four movements by Gabriel Faure, 19th Century French romanticist. "Quartet" is the first of two piano concertos by Faure.

"Invitation to Read" with Professor Alburey Castell will conclude the University broadcast for the day. From 6:45 to 7 Dr. Castell will review the book "Brave New World" by Aldous Huxley, a novel describing life on the Earth in a future century. Huxley describes the habits and mores of the people in a manner that has proved greatly interesting to students of the social sciences and readers of the Kinsey report.

Consultant Defends 'Outmoded Codes'

Protection of builders and the community from inferior materials and methods is the proper purpose of any building code, according to Arnold M. Westling, engineering and planning consultant.

Commenting on what a national magazine recently called a "senseless tangle" of outmoded city building codes, Westling, consultant for University's Bureau of Municipal Research and Service, asserted that such criticism can not be applied to the building codes of Eugene and most other Oregon cities.

Nationalists Shell American Freighter

HONG KONG, Jan. 9, (UP)—Capt. David "Davey" Jones of the blockade-running American freighter Flying Arrow wireless tonight that his ship was "unseaworthy" after a shelling by a Chinese Nationalist gunboat.

Reporting that he feared a new outbreak of fires—started by the shelling—Jones urgently asked the ship's owners in New York for aid in getting to Communist-held Shanghai from his anchorage off the mouth of the Yangtze river.

"Isbrandtsen New York," Jones said in an appeal to the Isbrandtsen line.
