

Poetry, Drama, Opera to Air Today on KOAC

Today's University Hour leans toward the classics, with poetry, opera, and Greek drama providing the entertainment over KOAC from 4 till 5 p.m.

"Time With the Authors," presented at 4, will have readings from the works of Robert Browning, Kenneth Neal, sophomore in liberal arts, will provide the interpretation.

A band concert featuring the works of Puccini will occupy a 15 minute spot at 4:15. The University band, under the direction of John Stehn will offer selections from "La Boheme," as well as several marches. The concert will be a regular Thursday feature of the hour.

Sophocles' famous play "Antigone" will be heard at 4:30 in an adaptation prepared for the radio workshop. The half-hour program is produced by Terry Roseen. Cast will include: Howard Zimmerman, Helen Johnson, Dick Hardie, Ruth Kilbourn, Evelyn Snow, Eric Mathews, Lorin Miller, Paul Wexler, Janet Harris, Ivan Hoyer, and Jack Leitheiser.

Nagy Discusses Russian Policy In Portland Talk

Ivan G. Nagy, professor of political science, spoke Tuesday before 450 members of the Portland Rotary Club on "Global Policy of the Soviet Union."

The main features of the Soviet system, according to Nagy, are the facts that it is global, and that it is a long-range plan. In the United States, he said, people think too much in atomic terms while the most important fact is not that this is the atomic age, but rather that this is the age of a clash in ideologies.

Russia capitalizes on the fact that the United States fails to see the importance of the ideological clash, Nagy declared.

Panhellenic to Meet

AWS Petitions Due For New Officers

Petitions for next year's officers of Associated Women Students were requested Wednesday by President Marie Lombard.

Applications are due Wednesday, Jan. 18. They will be accepted by Miss Lombard at Delta Delta Delta or by Mildred Chetty, Delta Gamma.

Junior women may petition for president or vice-president, sophomores for secretary or treasurer, and freshmen for reporter and sergeant-at-arms.

All University women are automatically members of the association.

University Library to Display War-Time Printed Swiss Books

Five hundred Swiss books printed during World War II will go on display at the University Library Feb. 1 to 15, under the auspices of the Legation of Switzerland.

Opening the exhibition on the campus will be an introductory talk on "Modern Switzerland and the Amazing Activities of War-Time Swiss Publishers," by D. M. Dougherty, head of the foreign language department.

Two Swiss films will also be shown on the initial program. One, "G.I.'s in Switzerland" reflects life in Switzerland. The second, entitled "Winter in the Alps" pictures the winter sports and scenery of the Swiss Alps.

The aim of the exhibition is to acquaint American book lovers with the achievements of Swiss writers and publishers in the past few years.

CULTURE SAVED

"Switzerland republished works of German, French, and Italian authors during the war when no printing was possible in these countries, thus saving the Western European culture," Fernand Rochat, representative of the Swiss consulate from San Francisco, explained.

Rochat was on the campus Wednesday arranging details of the exhibition which is now being shown at the University of Washington.

The exhibition should appeal to students especially, Rochat believes, because of the student exchange program between Switzerland and the United States.

"Students who plan to study in Europe can gain an understanding of European way of thinking from the exhibition," he pointed out.

SCIENCE WORKS INCLUDED

The collection includes books from all fields with special emphasis laid on scientific works. The majority of the books are in German or French, Rochat said.

The collection of books has already been shown at the Library of Congress in Washington; at Chautauqua, N.Y.; at the Cleveland Public Library; at the Architectural League of New York, under the patronage of the American Institute of Graphic Arts; at the University of Missouri; the University of Oklahoma; and the University of Utah.

From Oregon the books will go to Stanford for an exhibition there.

What the little kids would like to save for a rainy day is school.
