Skiers, Snow Bunnies Glow in Snow

Celebrating the joyous new year, Crox Delzels got separated from his party and his skis at Wildwood. And there is always the fellow who used the wrong kind of wax—climbing wax on backwards so the wearer can neither climb up nor slide down the hill. Or the ones who melt Metro wax . . .

tively.
As we climb into our trusty auto on our way to Skinner's Butte to watch the snow fall, we leave you with a parting thought . . . Meep! Meep!

Here are a few of the popular places to go skiing:

(1) Mt. Hood. Advantages: Blue Ox, Timberline Lodge, beautiful scenery, new tramway to take you within 3½ miles of Government Camp, skiing at night.

Bunnies Beware: Glade Trail marked for beginners . . . 'tain't so.

Inevitable: Blizzard or no snow at all, Walter Appley and his yodelers.

(2) Santiam's Hoodoo Bowl. Advantages: (?) One dorm for gents, another for ladies.

Bunnies Beware: New tow-rope, slippery when iced as Doug Carter can attest (straddled is not the way to ascend a slope).

(3) Willamette. Advantages: Hot springs, swimming pool (one Fiji sage says its a good way to break through the ice with your girls).

Complaints heard: Ascending beer prices, no home movies at Timberline.

One last word to the wise: "Novices, learn to control your skiing on the slopes, but in the lodges let enthusiasm be unbounded and uncontrolled."

It's a wonder all the germs in kisses don't die of painter's colic.
