'Town Hall' Calls Law Inadequate

Consensus of opinion at the Little Town Hall last night concerning the new Eugene ordinance which would punish the parents of juvenile delinquents for the crimes committed by their children, was that the law is inadequate as it stands and its benefits doubtful.

Jack R. Parsons, professor of sociology at the University and a member of the forum which discussed the situation, stated that he thought that the blame for the delinquency of children can not rightfully, in most cases, be placed on one factor such as parents.

He further stated that he thought that the municipal courts do not have the machinery to handle such cases properly.

Other forum participants were Police Chief Keith Jones, Stanley Darling, attorney, and Lewis Sherman, juvenile court officer.

Hershey Says Draft Halted War

WASHINGTON — (UP)—Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey said Thursday that the 1948 draft law prevented "World War III in 1948 and 1949."

He made the statement in urging a three-year extension of the law, now scheduled to expire June 24.

The present mood of congress is that any extension should be on a stand-by basis, with congress having sole authority to order inductions.

Hershey said he had "reservations" about giving congress sole authority because "I'm not so sure that we're going to have orderly government" at a time of emergency. But he took no definite stand for or against giving the president such authority.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson has testified that the president should have power to order inductions.

Hershey said he could do his job regardless of who has authority to start actual inductions. He said he would rather have a draft system with congress as the sole authority than no draft at all.

"Had congress passed a selective service act in 1936 as it did in 1948," Hershey said, "we might have avoided World War II in 1941 as we avoided World War III in 1948 and 1949."

4) Freshmen cannot play on fraternity intramural teams until the sixth week of winter term.

Panhellenic, according to President Fran Robson, will meet with heads of girls' dormitories to work out a solution for women.

"The IFC feels the question of divided loyalties has not been overcome by the action taken at the meeting," explained Fred Van Horn, IFC president. "However we are willing to accept the proposed plan in an effort to promote better relationships with the dormitories."

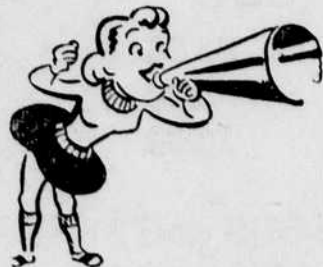

The IFC had gone on record favoring immediate rushing and pledging, and the IDC had stated it was in favor of deferred rushing and pledging; but both groups were willing to concede and accept this compromise proposal.
