

Ducks Lead Busy Activity Life; Here's the Straight Dope for Pop

By MARJORY BUSH

Today Dad is top man at Oregon, with all activities planned just for him. Dad is having a chance to see the campus in action—the new buildings, a student-arranged luncheon and tour, and the Oregon-Washington basketball game.

However, throughout the year the U. of O. is busy, and in case Dad would like to know what goes on at school the other nine months, this should give some answers.

Major Events

Two major events of the year are Homecoming during fall term, and Junior Weekend spring term. Homecoming has just about everything in the books, with alumni and friends being welcomed with the noise parade, frosh bonfire, sign contest, dance, and big football game.

Junior Weekend, held in May, typifies the campus in the longed-for spring. Highlights are the float parade, Junior Prom, all-campus sing, luncheon, and frosh-soph tug-of-war.

The campus is kept buzzing with games, school and house dances, weekly desserts and exchange dinners, throughout the year.

Varied tastes may enjoy the concert artists, University Theater productions, the forums of religious evaluation week, and the visiting lecturers.

Campus branches of the YWCA and YMCA sponsor discussions and social activities to make for a well-rounded program.

Fun—And Work

It's easy to see what a tremendous amount of fun—and work, college can be. It takes organization, throughout the school, classes and clubs to produce this program of wide-scale events.

University and class officers have much of this responsibility. The executive council of the ASUO, representing the two political parties at Oregon, the Associated Greek Students and the United Student's Association, tackles the problems of University scope.

Council Duties

Included here are: directing the student traffic court started last fall, studying such problems as the development of the Millrace, faculty rating program, and effective use of the student union.

Class affairs, such as the Sophomore Whiskerino, Junior Weekend, and Senior Ball are supervised by class officers.

Working under all are the endless committees which actually get the job done—writing invitations, decorating, cleaning-up.

But officers and committees would often be lost without the service organizations on the campus. Among these are Phi Theta Upsilon and Kwama, junior and sophomore women's honoraries, that help with everything from registering for Dads' Day to moving rushees during rush week. Sophomore men's honorary, Skull and Dagger, and Druids, for junior men, also perform various services for the University.

Publications

Helping to co-ordinate the campus is the Oregon Daily Emerald, published five times per week by the ASUO. The other chief campus publication, The Oregana, pictures life at Oregon during the year in its annual publication. Especially for the alumni is the magazine Old Oregon, published monthly.

As Dad can see, all these activities, plus classes and study hours, produce some mighty busy Ducks.

Education Group To Initiate Sunday

Pi Lambda Theta, national association for women in education, will give two research awards for studies on professional problems of women.

The awards of $400 each will be granted from the Ella Victoria Dobbs Fellowship Fund for significant research studies.

A study may be submitted by any individual whether or not an active member of Pi Lambda Theta, or presently engaged in education work.

Studies must be unpublished and can be on any aspect of the professional problems and contributions of women either in education or some other field.

The final study will be due June 1, 1950, in the office of the chairman of Committee on Studies and Awards. All further inquiries should be addressed to Alice H. Hayden, chairman, Committee on Studies and Awards, Seattle 5, Washington.

Advice to consumers from all quarters now includes everything except where to get the money.

Why is it that so many folks who are short of money try to be long on spending.

ed the margin to five points before Urban grabbed a lay-in shot to put Oregon in the clear.

From there on in, with the help of the two minute rule, the Ducks went into their final 57-49 win.

Husky Attacks Stilled

In the first half, when Warren's collapsing-man-to-man defense stopped the usual Washington offense which features all the play from the guards, McClarney tried two other forms of attack.

But Honest John's defense, on which he drilled his men all week, stopped every mode of Washington scoring punch. That, plus the red-hot ability of the Ducks to hit the hump, and their power under the backboards, spelled victory.

The two clubs meet again tonight in McArthur Court at 8 o'clock.

Presenting a concert with the University Symphony Orchestra Feb. 1 will be Andor Foldes, Hungarian-born pianist. He will present a combination lecture-recital on contemporary music Feb. 2.

The recital, open to the public, is being sponsored jointly by the Student Union Board and the School of Music.

Foldes, considered an expert in the field of contemporary music, is acquainted with many modern composers. He gave the first New York performance of Bela Bartok's Second Piano Concerto.

The pianist toured Europe during 1949. Besides concertizing and publishing many of his own compositions, Foldes has written a book for young people, "Keys to the Keyboard."

He recently recorded an album of the works of contemporary American composers, including Aaron Copland, Virgil Thomson, Roger Sessions, and Paul Bowles.
