

Williams Offers Traffic Solution For Amazon Flats Housing Area

In the past three and a half years 12 children have been hit by speeding automobiles in the Amazon Flats housing area.

This information was given by University Housing Director D. H. Williams in an explanation of the proposed placing of Amazon traffic violation jurisdiction in the hands of the ASUO student court.

Bills Take the Upswing feature, and is not at his best.

The Mayflower is second cheapest, and has second best in entertainment value with "Madame Bovary," starring Jennifer Jones. The saint to sinner gal is in between in this one, and is as capable as ever.

Unfortunately Van Johnson's first murder picture "rounds out" the bill—"Scene of the Crime." However, a couple of months ago it would have cost 72 cents to see each of these downtown, and now a lucky student can catch them both for 55 cents.

"Prince of Foxes," and "Portrait of Jennie" are the colossal productions at the Rex. "Foxes" is notable for its background scenes which are supposed to be magnificent because they were filmed on actual location. Personally, this doesn't quite make up for the picture which has Tyrone Power looking debonair, Wanda Hendrix looking beautiful, and Orson Welles looking. In "Portrait," David O. Selznick's last film before moving out of Hollywood, Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten carry on a romance that is difficult to understand but interesting to watch. Just when things are getting along nicely the girl leaves the boy for a vacation at the beach, the screen turns green, a larger-than-screen-size hurricane comes up, and the girl, who wasn't really living anyway, is drowned. Sound effects are magnificent. Miss Jones is something of a saint in this one.

The films at the Mac, "Dakota Lil" and "Amazon Quest"—ought to be good for something, maybe for conscientious popcorn fans who don't want to disturb anyone else in the audience and can time their chomps with shots of the six-shooters and yells of the jungle beasts.

B A Major

BOB MORTON, who appears tomorrow night as Briggs, in the University Theater production of "Thunder Rock," figures that now he'll stay with drama, even though he received a degree in business at the end of fall term.

"Luckily, none of the children has been badly hurt or killed," Williams stated. "We are trying to avoid the possibility of that happening."

Eugene city police are not required to enforce speeding laws in the Amazon area, Williams explained. Up to now the University has had no means of enforcement, and speeding has been flagrant in the district.

Williams plans to have the managers of the Amazon units deputized by the Lane County sheriff, if possible. These managers will then issue tickets to violators, and cases will be heard by the student court at its regular Tuesday evening sessions.

Parking violations will also be regulated by the court, the director added, but speeding is the main concern in the area at present.

Members of the court, created by the ASUO Executive Council last year, are Dick Neely, chairman; Steve Church, clerk; and Bill Kirkpatrick, sophomore member. A. L. Peiterson is faculty adviser.

The court now passes judgment on student parking violators at its weekly meeting, 7 p.m. each Tuesday in 6 Friendly.

U. O. PE Personnel Attend Conference

Two professors and a graduate student will represent the University at a social hygiene work conference to be held in Portland Feb. 3 and 4.

They are Jenelle Moorhead, associate professor of health education; Dr. Franklin B. Haar, professor of health education; and Mildred Ringo, graduate assistant in physical education.

The conference will be divided into four sections under discussion leaders.

Perpetuation Proposals Aired By Union Board

Discussion of various methods of Student Union Board perpetuation occupied most of yesterday's board meeting. A tentative perpetuation plan was presented by Henry Panian, senior in history. Further discussion and possible ratification is slated for next week.

Alumni Director Lester Anderson also presented a proposal to include an alumni representation on the Student Union Board. Decision on this measure will be made when the board considers other perpetuation business.

The Student Union Board also:

1. Heard a report by Elizabeth Kratt, senior in Romance Languages, concerning allocation of office and desk space in the Student Union Building to campus organizations.

2. Appointed Jim Wallace, senior in journalism; Patricia Boyle, sophomore in liberal arts; and Antoinette Kuzmanich, senior in education, to a committee to report on methods of setting up a program committee for the Union. The group will report next week on a study of program committees of other student unions.

3. Heard a report by Ed Peterson, junior in music, concerning an orientation program to precede opening of the Student Union Building next spring.

Next regularly scheduled Student Union Board meeting will be next Wednesday at 4 p.m. in the ASUO president's office in Emerald Hall.

Professor Talks On Pre-Marital Sex Relations

By KAREN TERRY

Does sex experience before marriage prevent frustration?

"Probably not," said Dr. Kirkendall Tuesday night in the third of his weekly "Marriage" lectures. "But there is no one answer to the question of premarital sex standards."

Many couples believe that such experience will "cut down frustration," he said; however, more feel that it increases it.

Frustration is lessened in two cases: when it answers a "built up curiosity concerning sex," or when the couple may continue to have relations whenever they wish.

"When barriers are set up in the way of continued sex relations after the first time," he said, "frustration seems to increase."

Personalities Adjust

The notion that premarital relations will predict or assist marital adjustment is based on the idea that adjustment is physical, Kirkendall said. On the contrary, he believes, it is an adjustment of personality.

"If a couple have freedom of attitude and legitimate ideas, they will develop the proper technique later," he said.

Many psychologists, he said, believe illegal sexual intercourse produces neuroticism, for if such relations do build frustration, it is a psychological, not physical, maladjustment.

"Sex urgency problems often center around personality problems," he said.

Handling Sex Problem

There are several ways we can contribute to a better handling of the sex problem, Kirkendall pointed out:

Better understanding of sex as a part of the love relationship; finding of ways in which matured young people can marry earlier; and more frankness in male-female relationships.

Kirkendall's last "Marriage and the Family" lecture will be given next Tuesday night under the sponsorship of the campus YMCA and YWCA.
