

Out of the Bottle...

(Ed. Note: In introducing the amusement section in the campus yellow sheet, it was deemed necessary to call on some outstanding name in the field of amusement. While coming out of an opium binge, we met the man for the job, Dr. R. Virgil Canasta, Ph.D., LL.D., AGS and AA, nationally known author and gag writer. He consented to write an article on amusement. He is the author of such books as "Delinquents and Criminals, their Making and Unmaking," "Three Years on Burnside," and "Life in a Glen-Plaid Suit," the tale of the disguise he wore while gathering information for his forthcoming (if he doesn't come to a "fifth" first) novel, "Fun in the Making." His treatise on amusement follows.)

 "There are three methods of amusing oneself: one, alone; two, with somebody; and three, don't. The first is the most common among c. s. (college students), especially in this age of dreaded epidemics which are sweeping the country and threatening the social success of every man, woman and c. s. I am referring to such scourges as halitosis, B. O., cigaret hangover (the other kind has become unfashionable due to a successful advertising campaign by Bromo-Seltzer), five o'clock shadow, and middle-aged spread. No one is completely safe. Not even half-safe. There is no disgrace in having fun by yourself.

"The second method seems to have gained some popularity since portables, picnics, and drive-ins came into fashion. There are two trains (non-mule) of thought on this second method. One group, the OSA (a foggy colloquialism meaning "Kremlin") is violently opposed to the movement on the ground that c.s. shouldn't have fun having fun. The other movement, The Noble Elves, are sponsoring such movements as not allowing children under 16 (years) to read the laundry list for the opposite (naughty word); not allowing male and female students to use the same curriculum; and separating male and female students at athletic events.

"The third group is divided up into two groups, the do's and the don't's. The latter is rapidly being replaced by the former. Today, more than ever before, young people are having fun saying "I do," but then, who can say. Thousands proclaim that it is the only thing. In some cities, its popularity has increased 500%. "Colossal," and "stupendous" have been used to describe this new game that is sweeping the nation. Any number can play and you make your own rules. The game is called "Stromboli."

"In closing, Destiny's Tots, may I say "have fun." And remember, if Aly Kahn, Rossellini can.

(Ed. Note: Due to the weekly appearance of this amusement section on every fish day (it is hoped that all of you c.s. (college students) will patronize the advertisers on these pages while seeking fun, thereby filling their, the advertisers, coffers with copious quantities of that green stuff, thus convincing them that adver-

Next week we will call on some big name to shed some Chinese veteran and author of the "Vanishing Vet's Viewpoint," or "How to Have Fun on $75 a Month Without Smoking, Drinking, Dating, or Cheating.")

 Remember the birthday
 But never the age.

HOUSE DANCE . . .

Where the drinks are cool
 The music is hot,
 The table's reserved
 And the guests are not.

 She—"That's my business."
 He—"Oh, a professional."

New Service

This is the first appearance of the Emerald's new feature section, which will be published henceforth every Friday. Feature editor is Gretchen Grondahl; Cork Mobley is in charge of advertising for the section.

So It's Spring Already? Owl Gives Picnic Scoop

By The Wise Old Owl

Now that we have the assurances of 12 robins, supported by the dubious word of Bob Funk, that spring is here, it's as sure as macaroni for lunch that picnic-time is on the way.

(There will be a slight pause for three months of drenching rain and bone-chilling cold, followed by picnic time.)

Now as the old wheeze has it, forewarned is something-or-other, so for the benefit of callow young freshmen and unindoctrinated transfers unfamiliar with Oregon picnics, and just generally for the heck of it, here are a few Handy Helpful Hints for Prospective Picnickers.

In the first place, you need a mixed group. That is, the sexes should be represented, preferably in equal numbers. There are only two sexes (according to independent scientific surveys of 3,774,813 doctors from coast to coast) so this shouldn't be too confusing to work out.

Secondly, you must have refresh-
