

KOAC Airs Concert Bits

The Faculty Music Program, usually heard on Wednesday at 6:15, will not be presented today. Instead KOAC will feature excerpts from the 1948 concert of the University Singers.

The half hour feature is being run partly in response to requests by state stations for presentation of recorded University programs which may be used by various organizations throughout Oregon.

"Invitation to Read," the book review session with Alburey Castell, head of the department of philosophy as reviewer, will occupy its usual 15 minute spot from 6:45 till 7. Dr. Castell will discuss John Stuart Mill's "On Liberty." Next Wednesday he will wade through Dostoyevsky for a look at "Brothers Karamazov."

U.O. Exchanges P E Professors

Paul R. Washke, professor of physical education, has been assigned to an exchange professorship with Dr. John H. Shaw of Syracuse University in New York for this next summer session, Dean R. W. Leighton of the Physical Education School announced Tuesday.

Washke will instruct classes at Syracuse University on administration of physical education facilities and history and theory of physical education. Shaw will take Washke's position at the University of Oregon.

This exchange of professorship will be for the duration of the summer session.

Professor's Article In Art Magazine

An article by W. S. Baldinger, professor of art, is featured in the February issue of "Magazine of Art."

"Orozco's Last Murals" is the title of the article, which is illustrated with Baldinger's own photographs.

He presented the same material to the annual College Art Association meeting in Chicago last month.

This is the second article by Baldinger to be published in the magazine.

U.O. French Club Meeting Next Week

"Les Thelemites," French Club, will hold a meeting at 8:15 p.m., next Tuesday, at Wesley House.

First and second-year students from the classes of Miss Raymonde Richard, instructor in romance languages, will present scenes from "Topaze," a play of the late 1920's by Marcel Pagnol, contemporary French author.

Following the program, the group will sing French songs and listen to records. Refreshments will be served.

Psych Department Gets Apparatus

The psychology department has acquired two memory drums for use in rote memory experiments.

The drums, which will pass a series of pictures, words, and syllables, before a subject at regular intervals, will be used both in the advanced and introductory laboratories. Their chief value is that they can control many of the factors involved in memory with a great deal of exactness.

Libe Staff Sets Benefit Dance

A benefit folk-dance party will be sponsored by the Library Staff Association after the basketball game with Idaho Saturday in Geringer Annex.

Square dancing, to be called by Miss Rosamond Wenthworth, associate professor of physical education, couple dancing, waltzes, schottisches, and polkas will be featured. Authentic Oregon folk music will be played on records during the intermission.

Admission will be 25 cents.

Book Discussion Slated Wednesday

The first comprehensive book on human genetics will be discussed by Dr. R. R. Huestis, professor of zoology, Wednesday, at 7:30 p.m., in the Browsing Room of the Library.

Dr. Stern, author of the book to be discussed "Human Genetics," is a refugee from Germany before the last World War. He is now professor of human genetics at the University of California, and taught before that at the University of Rochester.

C. W. Clancy, associate professor of biology, will lead a discussion period after the talk. The speech is part of the lecture-forum series sponsored by the Association of Patrons and Friends of the University Library and the University Library.

Today's Students Fail to Grasp Symbols: Gilkey

Preachers must endeavor to put across their points in the student's own language because the language of the St. James Bible is foreign to the student.

Other Literature Included

The situation carries over into the student's appreciation of other great literature making it difficult, if not impossible, for him to enjoy. He cannot read Shakespeare or Kipling with any adequate understanding because our Bible was a frequent source on which they depended.

Modern authors too, rely on the Bible, he said. The works of Arnold Toynbee are crowded with illustrations and extended parables from the King James Bible.

Contemporary religious illiteracy is not limited to literature and Biblical interpretation. The religious illiterate will graduate from college and find himself in a situation where he lacks "religious ballast." He is either upset or off balance because he fails to understand any of the great truths. He may fall victim to religious proselytizing propaganda, accept the precepts of a faith he does not understand, and one day be forced to meet the ultimate issues of life, unprepared.

'Learn to Use Symbols'

We must learn to use the symbols for that mysterious reality we cannot fully understand, Dr. Gilkey explained. God is greater than human speech. We must use symbols to understand him and his lessons. The profoundest examples of human loyalty and love are expressed in this way.

Our relationship with God is revealed in human relationships at their best. These relationships cannot thrive on what some theologians define as "Vitamin I"—setting our own needs and welfare before those of our fellow beings.

We need more of "Vitamin U," interest in others and faith in God. To achieve our ideal concept of ourselves, we must learn to recognize these truths through the symbols in which they are presented, Dr. Gilkey stated.

Scientists Needed For Civil Service

Graduates in a physical science, or with a combination of 4 years of experience and education in a physical science field may apply for positions with the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Positions open are for technologist, shorthand reporter, and laboratory electronic mechanic. All are located in Washington, D. C., Maryland, and Virginia.

Students may inquire further at local civil service offices.
