

Portland Dads Originate Graduate Employment Plan

The Portland group of the University of Oregon Dads Association has instituted a plan to help 1950 University graduates find employment in Portland.

Seniors will fill out brief information blanks which will be assigned to Dads and others familiar with various fields of employment in the Portland area.

Vets May Join Reserve Corps

Student veterans interested in extra spending money while attending the University may join the Eugene Organized Reserve Corps and become a member of the 426th Truck Transportation battalion.

Lt. Col. Charles F. Ziebarth, unit commander and professor of business administration, made this announcement yesterday.

A recent Sixth Army order changed the designation of the local military organization's headquarters unit from a detachment to a full company. This change opened the unit's table of organization to at least 45 more enlisted men above the rank of private first class.

Members of the organization receive one day's pay in grade for each meeting attended. Meetings are held twice a month from 7:30 til 9:30 p. m., at the headquarters of the Eugene Organized Reserve Corps at 1450 West 12th Ave.

Specific grades open above the rank of private include two master sergeants, one sergeant first-class, nine sergeants, 15 corporals, and 18 first class privates.

Men who are interested in joining the organization may receive further particulars by contacting First Sergeant C. B. Ruckh, assistant unit instructor of the Eugene ORC, or by attending the company's next meeting on Feb. 22 at 7:30 p. m. at 1450 West 12th Ave.

Full particulars may also be obtained at the Army Recruiting Service in the Armory in downtown Eugene.

After-Game Dance Plans Progressing

The Junior Interfraternity Council held a joint session with the University Panhellenic Council Feb. 14. The Lemon-Orange Squeeze was the center of discussion, and all committees reported considerable progress in preparation for this event.

The Council stressed the need for complete publicity and all members were urged to campaign for a successful turn-out. Flying speeches to be presented at OSC also received approval of the two groups.

walls. Out of curiosity, he averaged those of the rest rooms in Commerce, Johnson, and the Chem and PE buildings. Like Gallup, he turned out to be oh-so-wrong. The Rogers prediction was a classy 2.95. The gentlemen who proudly put their grades up for inspection in the Chemistry building turned out to be either the biggest liars or the best students. They had a 3.23 accum. It just couldn't be; why that's better than Orides did!

Regarding the poetry, Rogers says he's sorry, but it just isn't appearing any more. It's probably indicative of the trend taken by the student mind of late, a deadening preoccupation with grades. Gone are the efforts at student expression, the fine nuances, the lusty scribbles of an embryonic Norman Mailer, the pathos and humor. Gone, but not forgotten.

Don't grieve too much though, for who knows? Perhaps out of the wilds of Eastern Oregon or somewhere along her rugged coastline there is at this moment a Paul Bunyan of the gent's john rising—rising to carve new and greater literature into the walls of the rest rooms here, and forever endear himself in the hearts of students.

Second Alumni Institute Tomorrow in Portland

Former University students will gather in Portland Saturday afternoon for the Oregon Alumni Association's second annual Alumni Institute.

They will hear addresses by University President Harry K. Newburn, Football Coach Jim Aiken, and four other faculty members. The Institute will be held in the grand ballroom of the Multnomah Hotel.

First on the day's program is a luncheon at which President Newburn and Aiken will speak.

Later in the afternoon, Dr. James H. Gilbert, professor emeritus of economics, will discuss gambling and speculative enterprises.

"Europe on the Half-Shell" is the topic of Gordon Wright, associate professor of history.

Dean Theodore Kratt of the music school will present "Notes to You," a lesson in music appreciation, with illustrations on the keyboard.

Ending the speech program, Gordon A. Sabine, assistant professor of journalism, will discuss "How Stupid Can You Get?" Sabine will talk about the reader's place in the communication chain.

A reception and cocktail hour in the hotel Marine Room will conclude the Institute.
