

Court Continues Investigation On Parking Meter Situation

Student court members are continuing their investigation of the city's action in putting up parking meters along Kincaid between 12th and 13th and along 11th between Alder and Hilyard.

Members have met with City Manager Oren King but no definite action has resulted, Chairman Dick Neely stated after the court's regular session Tuesday night.

Neely emphasized that Susan Campbell residents may park in front of the door in the yellow zone for periods no longer than ten minutes for unloading purposes.

Still frequent is the violation of parking restrictions between Deady and Villard Halls, Neely said. Parking in this zone is prohibited at all times, including after 5 p. m. and on Saturdays and Sundays, because of fire hazard.

Many students do not realize that when they receive tickets for student traffic violations they may forfeit bail at the Office of Student Affairs during the week and are not required to attend the Tuesday evening court sessions unless they feel they have a case to present, the chairman said.

Ten cases were heard by the court Tuesday; seven students were found guilty and fined $1 each. One case was dismissed, one student was merely issued a warning, and one decision was postponed pending further consideration of the facts involved.

One final notice and two second warnings were sent out by the court. Failure to appear before the court after the final notice will result in the turning over of the case to the Office of Student Affairs. Disciplinary measures up to and including suspension of University registration may be enforced by the Office.

Tri-Delts to Give $200 Scholarship To U.O. Women

Delta Delta Delta social sorority will award scholarships this year, as in the past, to deserving women students in 94 U. S. colleges and universities where there are chapters of the women's fraternity.

The amount awarded to each campus included in the competition will not exceed $200.

Scholarships for 1950 will be presented in honor of Althea K. Hottel, dean of women at the University of Pennsylvania, and national president of the American Association of University Women. Miss Hottel is a member of the fraternity.

Applicants should be well-qualified students, who show promise of becoming valuable citizens. Membership in a fraternal organization is not required.

Judges will be members of the Tri-Delt committee on awards. Successful candidates will be notified after May 15, and the scholarships will be sent to them at the start of the term for which the awards are made.

Deadline for submitting applications is Mar. 31. Blanks may be secured in the Office of Women's Affairs, 201 Emerald Hall.

These scholarships are in addition to the local chapter's scholarships awarded during Junior Week-end.

Students Enter Speech Contest

Kelly Farris, junior in the law school, and Richard L. Zarones, sophomore in business, will represent the University of Oregon in the Inter-Collegiate Oratory and Radio Contest Tuesday, Feb. 21, to be held at Corvallis.

Farris is entered in the State "Peace" Oratory contest, while Zarones is participating in the Radio Broadcasting contest. These men were chosen on basis of meritorious achievement.

Two graduate students, Howard Zimmerman and Robert Hammill of the Speech Department, and K. E. Montgomery, Assistant Professor of Speech, will accompany Oregon's representatives and participate as judges in the contest.

This Inter-Collegiate contest involves students from Oregon State, Portland, Pacific University, Willamette U., George Fox College, and Linfield as well as the University of Oregon, and is sponsored by the state-wide Inter-Collegiate Forensic Association of Oregon.

Preliminary contests will be held at 3 p. m. Final rounds in the "Peace" contest is scheduled for 8 p. m.

Pledge class officers are Bob Metz, president; Jim McAlear, vice-president; and Beldon Owens, secretary-treasurer.

There's No Science in China, Eberhard Tells Large Audience

By STAN TURNBULL

"There is no science in China." This was the statement, later somewhat qualified, made Tuesday night by Dr. Wolfram Eberhard, associate professor of sociology in the University of California and one-time resident in China.

Speaking on "Science and Society in China" before an overflowing audience in the University of Oregon's Chapman Hall, Dr. Eberhard's talk concluded the Far Eastern Studies Conference held on the campus Monday and Tuesday.

Resist Change

Chinese resistance to change of any kind, brought on by the social structure which in turn was an attempt to solve population pressure which was a problem as early as the first century, was the essence of Dr. Eberhard's explanation of Chinese lack of science.

"Westerners have changed their surroundings rather than themselves. In China it is the other way; they have attempted to adjust themselves to situations," the sociologist said. "This essential difference in approach evolved an extremely stable form of society."

"But scientists wanted to use science as a political weapon (which would mean change) and the ruling gentry could do nothing else but suppress science," he asserted.

Wars and trade have often been called the developers of science, Dr. Eberhard noted, but in China their effect was different.

China Primitive

In Europe, he observed, there was technical competition in methods of warfare, but this was not necessary in China, as the entire area, and thus all possible opponents, was primitive.

And all trade, he went on, was under discrimination. The business man was of a lower social order, beneath the ruling class of gentry, who were a combination officer-scholar-landlord class firmly entrenched in office through family alliances.

"Trade produces change, and this was dangerous to the gentry," the speaker noted.

Between 400 and 200 B.C., he said, while government was in transition from a feudal state to the gentry-controlled state, a little science was accepted by the Chinese from foreigners. This included rudimentary geography, and astronomy. Then the gentry gained control and the chance was past.

Philosophies Differ

Digressing a little, Dr. Eberhard, who for 11 years taught Chinese at the University of Ankara in Turkey, explained a basic difference between Western and Chinese philosophies of science.

Red Cross Drive Kickoff Banquet Held Last Night

In preparation for the Campus Red Cross Drive which gets started tomorrow, a "Kickoff" banquet was held Tuesday night for committee chairmen and Lane County workers.

J. M. Mjoiness, assistant to volunteer workers in Oregon, was speaker for the dinner, which was held at the Anchorage Cafe.

"The Red Cross asserts the importance of the individual," Mjoiness pointed out. "Its disaster work is intended to redeem a person to take his place again in the community. It is through the neighborliness of all the people who contribute to the organization's work that we are able to help."

Stressing the importance of the Red Cross throughout the world he stated, "To a D. P. in Israeli, it means hope and faith; to a person in the tornado-struck areas of the South, it means aid; to the vets in Oregon's hospital at Roseburg it means a feeling of respect for campus representatives who come to entertain for an evening."

Others attending the banquet were Mrs. William Stevens, adviser of the campus chapter of the Red Cross; Mrs. Cora Purtle, Lane County manager of the Red Cross; and K. W. Onthank, director of the graduate placement service.

The campus drive will extend through Feb. 28. The ten top houses in collections will be published in the Emerald each day of the campaign.

Stanford Prof Tells Conference Of Buddhist Art

Millard B. Rogers, professor of art and curator of Oriental art at Stanford, Monday night explained to the conference on the Far East how he examined examples of Buddhist art in the northwest Chinese town of Tun Huang.

Mr. Rogers was one of the two speakers at the conference which was sponsored by the University committee on Far Eastern studies.

He explained that he reached the small town at the last possible moment before China fell to the Communist invasion.

Tun Huang, though now very small town in a desert, it was at one time a thriving city in a thickly populated region.

Near the town Mr. Rogers found an array of caves of a Buddhist monastic community which were very rich in wall paintings. Most of them have to do with Buddhist subjects.

Mr. Rogers photographed many of the more important of paintings, and illustrated his lecture with color pictures.

These paintings were described as a fundamental part to the history of Chinese civilization from the time of Christ for some 100 years afterward.

Mr. Rogers emphasized the minute care with which the later paintings were rendered as large formal gatherings of Buddhist dieties.

YMCA Leader Meets

Paul Keyser, in charge of YMCA work with college students in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Montana conferred with local student and faculty leaders in Eugene Feb. 20 and 21.

While here he met with Dr. Roy McCall, chairman of a special study committee on plans for evaluating the work of the University YMCA and planning for the future of the organization.
