Time Trials Drizzled Out; OSC Meet Looms

By DAVE TAYLOR

A steady drizzling rain prevented the Oregon thinclads from running time and distance trials yesterday afternoon as they prepared for the Oregon-Oregon State Relays here Saturday.

The Ducks were forced to work out in the fieldhouse behind the Physical Education school. Coach Bill Bowerman said the tests against the clock would be cancelled this week.

"We didn't need the time trials to put us in better condition," the Webfoot mentor commented. "They were to be run only to determine the not-too-obvious choices for the individual events Saturday. Now I'll be forced to arbitrarily select the entries."

Plenty To Go By

Bowerman's selections probably won't be too arbitrary since he has the results of the intrasquad meet held last Saturday and other pre-season timings to guide him. The Duck coach said he intended to make out the entry list last night and inform the men today what event they would enter.

The Relays have been changed this year to cover the full gamut of events which make up an ordinary Northern Division track meet. For the first time the relays will include the pole vault, broad jump, discus, and javelin. The enlargement came about by mutual agreement between Bowerman and Oregon State Track Coach Doc Swan.

Other events included in the meet are the 440-yard relay, the 880, mile, two-mile, four-mile, shuttle hurdles, shot put, and the high jump.

Taylor-made Aggie Squad Being Rebuilt

CORVALLIS—The job of rebuilding a football team pretty well scuttled by the loss of 16 letterman veterans got under way at Oregon State this week with the opening of a 30-session spring practice.

Coach Kip Taylor, who piloted the Beavers to a mythical northern division championship and seven victories in 10 starts in his first year at the helm last fall, wasted no time in getting the squad down to heavy work and promised a scrimmage session or two by the end of the first week.

No More Carpenter

Toughest holes to fill will be those left by Ken Carpenter, all-coast left halfback; Capt. Tom DeSylvia, steady right guard; and Capt. elect Stan McGuire, brilliant right end killed tragically in a to-boggan accident in January. Heaviest all-around losses were suffered in the backfield where four halfbacks and three fullbacks graduated.

Lettermen on hand are John Thomas, Don Nibblett and Cliff Snider; ends; Herman Clark, Bill Farnham and Jim Hanker, tackles; Jim Clark, Don Zarosinski, Wes Hogland and Dave Lofts, guards; Pete Palmer and Al Gray, centers.

Gridders Get New White Lids

A new experiment, designed to eliminate dents in the head, has proven successful for the Webfoot football squad.

Head Coach Jim Aiken said Wednesday that he had ordered new plastic helmets for varsity use during this autumn's gridiron outing.

The new-fangled head paraphernalia has an inside compartment that resembles the old helmet liners that members of the armed forces wore. There is a system of webbing, and a foam rubber, perforated "cushion" inside, through the outside shape is about the same as conventional gridiron head gear.

Aiken, who has tried out the helmet on about a dozen "guinea pigs" during the first three three spring football drills, said that the new shipment of ftoppers would be solid white.

Bumps and Bruises...

By SAM FIDMAN

After three days of organized bone-crushing, the University of Oregon varsity grid machine came up with hundreds of bumps and bruises—but no notable injuries, according to Head Coach Jim Aiken.

Despite the drizzly leak in the Heavens Wednesday, Aiken ran his charges through a thorough scrimmage, in which he made good use of his second and third stringers.

Webfoots Host Vanport Today

Oregon's baseball club hosts Vanport JC at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Howe Field if the rain has no objections.

The Ducks will be trying for their third straight non-conference win when they meet the Vikings. Rain cancelled yesterday's clash with Lewis and Clark and the weather man says the same thing is likely to happen today.

Don Kirsch plans to use three pitchers today, as he did against Portland. Big Gus Knickrehm is slated to work the first three innings, Con Sheffer will hurl the next three, and Stan Aune goes the rest of the way.

Norv Ritchey likely will be behind the plate.

The schedule for the rest of the week brings Willamette here for a twin bill starting at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon, and the Webfoots travel to Portland Saturday for a return engagement with the Pilots.

The idea here was to see just what the varsity crew had below the surface, and in Jim's own words it was "both good and bad."

The coach passed out roses for Wednesday afternoon's performances, with one going to Jerry Peckover, fullback candidate from Oregon City. Aiken was also impressed with the play of Rapid Bill Fell, who scurried through the entire team for several touchdowns.

Room Full of Roses

Delmer Clemens showed well again, as did Don Eldart. Both are guard hopefuls, with Clemens, from Burns, fresh from the Frosh, and Eldart a newcomer from Aberdeen, Wash. Tommy Lyon, Long Beach, Calif., looked good in his backfield chores: Bob Carey drew praise for his work as defensive back and safety man.

An old Aiken flame, Darwin Farnsworth, ran like a rabbit, much to the pleasure of his boss. Jerry Shaw performed well at tackle, and Dean Hanson did a man's work as line backer. Jake Williams is the leading candidate for left end duties, followed by Jack Lust and Sam Nicolopolos.
