

U.S. Policy Is Not The Only Way To Win Cold War Says Pacifist

By LOIS REYNOLDS

"Don't ever feel that your war is the only way or even the best way in winning the cold war," Igal Roodenko, pacifist speaker said in a campus speech Sunday afternoon.

A former Cornell student in anti-war groups, Mr. Roodenko was a delegate of the War Resisters' League to the World Pacifist Meeting in India lately and has traveled in India, Israel, and Europe.

"Assuming that an atom bomb war would destroy the world," the speaker remarked, "either we pacifists are right—or it doesn't make any difference." Roodenko declared that democracy really works, but since all people don't practice it, some foreigners are confused. An example asserted by the speaker was discrimination against dark-skinned foreign students.

The pacifist thinker pointed out that the conflict is not between ideologies but between the ruler and ruled groups in the ideologies, and between the masters or rulers of the different groups.

The United States could be pushed into a war if it had no other alternate but to die, and Marxists believe that they will have peace and plenty "just as soon as the capitalists are disposed of," he said.

"Setting one's own house in order" was deemed the first thing to do, but keeping an open mind was equally stressed.

Editorial Contest Has $500 Prizes

Five hundred dollars in prizes will be awarded by the Intercollegiate Association for Study of the Alcohol Problem for winning entries in its annual editorial contest.

"Social Pressure Against Alcohol" is the theme of the contest. Any undergraduate college student is eligible to enter, except those who have written professionally.

Entries should be written in editorial style and be 500 to 800 words in length, according to contest directions. Titles are to be selected by contestants.

Manuscripts are to be typed or written in ink. They should be postmarked no later than June 20.

Judgment will be based on "soundness and originality of thought, clarity of expression, and accuracy of basic facts."

Manuscripts are to be mailed to Edwin H. Maynard, Contest Secretary, Box 3342, Merchandise Mart Station, Chicago, Ill.

New Dynamos To Supply Heat For University

Two 1500 kilowatt steam turbine generators at the new steam plant now under construction will supply the University with its own electricity next fall.

Used steam taken from the generators will be utilized to heat the campus and the old heating plant will be shut down. The architecture school will use the old building after the boilers are removed.

Nearing completion are the walls to the new boiler room, which will house three boilers with room for a fourth. Immediately to the east will be the room for the two turbines and generators, with space for a fourth unit. The operating floor will be above the boiler room.

The boilers will use scrap wood as fuel, with oil as a stand-by.

The tower seen extending above the structure will house the water tank into which the condensed steam flowing back from the campus will be stored for re-use.

Pipes from the plant to the campus will extend through a tunnel to be built under the highway and Millrace.

Summer Session In Art Scheduled

A summer session in art will be held again this year at Klamath Falls.

The session, sponsored by the Oregon Technical Institute, will run for four weeks. The opening date of the session is July 17. It will end on Aug. 11.

The school is administered by the Klamath Art Association.

There are two two-hour courses being offered this year which are lower-division painting and drawing. Upper division credit may be earned by special arrangement.

The staff will consist of Vern Swansen, noted west coast painter, and Frederick Heidel of the University Art School.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Helen Brown at extension 467.

Divorce figures indicate that more and more women are becoming wealthy by decrees.

Kwama Scholarship Applications Due May 8

Applications for the three $100 scholarships to be awarded by Kwama, sophomore women's service honorary, are due at 5 p.m., May 8 in the Office of Women's Affairs.

The awards will go toward expenses of the sophomore year. Money for the scholarships was earned through the honorary's various fund-raising projects, such as selling programs, sweater bags and buttons, and ushering at concerts.

Sociologist to Attend Research Conference

E. H. Moore, head of the sociology department, leaves Thursday for Santa Barbara, Cal., to attend the Social Science Research Council Committee. At this conference he will give a talk on "Later Maturity."
