Oregon Co-eds Prepare for Summer Session at University of Hawaii

By BILL CLOTHIER

Go west, young woman.

And that's what 29 University of Oregon co-eds and 2 housemothers are going to do this summer. The gals are going to pick up a few extra college credits at the University of Hawaii summer session and the housemothers are going along to see that it stops right there.

Mrs. Eleanor Creason, housemother at Delta Zeta and Mrs. Myra Roach, Gamma Phi Beta housemother, will herd their charges aboard a United Air Lines mainliner at San Francisco June 24, and hope the next time they set foot on earth it will be on the island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii.

They will spend 46 days on the island. The school session lasts 42 days. While there, they will stay at Wilcox Hall, Punahou School, about six blocks from the University of Hawaii campus. The campus is located up above Honolulu and overlooks Waikiki beach, the rich man's sea-ion caves.

According to James Bronson, Eugene Travel Service, who has arranged transportation and living accommodations for the group, there was a similar tour last year which was so successful that it resulted in this year's trip.

The following girls are not in the picture but are going to Oahu: Joan Cavey, Phyllis Garden, Joan Hedgepath, Joanne Lewis, Mary McBee, Sally Mount, Marjorie Cardwell.

Sally Erickson, Janet Wetherall, Betsy Stelle, Judy Bailey, Jacquelyn Margetts, Jean Smedley, and Irene McLeod.
