

Language Students Cast In Medieval French Play

"Maitre Pierre Pathelin," a Fifteenth Century French farce, will be presented by students in the Department of Foreign Languages today, Tuesday, and Wednesday in the Experimental Theater in Villard Hall.

The program, which will begin at 8:30 each evening with a matinee at 4 p.m. Wednesday, will feature also the reading of several medieval rondeaux and chansons written by Francois Villon, Josquin des Pres, Guillaume de Machaut, Christine de Pisan, and Charles d'Orleans. Medieval music will be heard between acts of the play.

"Maitre Pierre Pathelin," which has been popular on the French stage since it was first produced in the Fifteenth Century, is a comedy aimed at shyster lawyers. Pathelin, a lawyer who has lost his practice, swindles a draper out of several yards of material for new clothes for him and his wife, and avoids paying the draper by pretending he is sick.

The draper accuses a shepherd of stealing and killing his sheep and the shepherd asks Pathelin to defend him in the trial. Using Pathelin's device for winning his case against the draper, the shepherd also avoids paying the fee Pathelin asks.

A cast from classes of Rene L. Picard, professor of Romance languages, will present the play on Monday and Wednesday evenings. Bill Wallace as Pathelin is supported by Coralie Nelson and his wife, Guillemette; Dave Eakin as Guillaume the draper; David Twohy as the judge; and Jim Blue as the shepherd, Thibaut.

Students from the classes of C. L. Johnson, professor of Romance languages, will give the play on Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon. Don Hensley will play Pathelin, with Mrs. Phyllis Nan Thompson as Guillemette; John Palmquist as the draper; John Palmer as the judge; and David Johnson as the shepherd.

Tickets to the productions may be obtained for 50 cents from members of the Foreign Languages Department or at the door before performances. One ticket will enable the holder to see one or more performances of the play.

The production is sponsored by Pi Delta Phi, French honorary organization.

Mothers Present $2,400 to U.O. For Scholarships

The University of Oregon Mothers presented a total of $2,800 to the University for scholarships and endowments at their annual business meeting on the campus last week.

Of the total, $2,400 was allotted for special scholarships, and the remainder for scholarship and endowment purposes.

The annual awards for named scholarships were also announced by the Mothers.

The $300 Petronella G. Peets scholarship was awarded to Elizabeth Kingsbury of Milwaukie. Kathryn J. Moore, Jefferson High school in Portland, was awarded the $300 Louise H. Cook scholarship, and Dorothy Pederson of Salem received the Burt Brown Baker scholarship of $300.

Four $100 and three $50 supplementary scholarships were also awarded.

State Teachers Ask Training Expansion

A poll of Oregon state teachers and school administrators has revealed that more than half believe that elementary teaching training should be carried on in state colleges and universities. An almost equal number favor the extension of secondary training to colleges of education.

The survey was carried on by a University class in higher education, under the direction of Hugh B. Wood, professor of education.

Summer Emerald Positions Open

Editorial positions, including the editorship, are open on the Summer Emerald, which replaces the Summer Sun as the campus newspaper during summer session this year.

Interested students may contact Warren C. Price, professor of journalism, in his office, 3 Journalism.

The position of business manager is also open, with inquiries being directed to Dick Williams, director of the Student Union.

The Summer Emerald will be published twice weekly this year, as compared to the old weekly Sun. It will probably be a four-page paper, Mr. Price said.

Credit of from one to three hours will be given for work on the paper, under a course in advanced practices—J 419. The course will carry graduate credit for non-journalism majors and undergraduate credit for majors.

Carolyn Oleman Recital Tuesday

A recital of classic and modern music will be given by Carolyn Oleman, junior in music, at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the School of Music auditorium.

The program will include two preludes and Fugues by Bach, Beethoven's Sonata, opus No. 2, No. 3, and Two Intermezzo and Capricio by Brahms.

On the modern side, Miss Oleman will present Three Rondos by Bela Bartok, and Hindemith's Sonata No. 2.

The simile "pretty as a picture" lost some of its effectiveness with the development of modern art.

Jeppeson Wins Club Election

Dolores Jeppesen, junior in sociology, was elected president of the Oregon Cosmopolitan Club Friday night at the YMCA.

Other new officers are Jim Oswald, vice president; Irene Teddish, secretary; Wah Chun, treasurer; Dave Swanson, sergeant-at-arms; Carolyn Oleman, social chairman; Bob Biggs, alumni secretary; and Lois Reynolds, publicity chairman. L. O. Wright, professor of Romance languages, will continue as club adviser.

J. O. Dart, professor of physics, showed colored slides of western Europe to the group after elections.

Corvallis club members attended the Friday night meeting invited Eugene Cosmopolitans to a picnic and dance Saturday afternoon.

The Oregon group has scheduled a semi-formal dance at 8:30 p.m. Friday at the campus YMCA for members and their guests. Guest tickets are 25 cents. Members are to contact Dirk Schepers at the Chi Psi house for tickets.

The amateur golfers are out in force again—trying to get the swing of things.

Kelsen Believes United Nations Ultimate Failure

By JEANETTE SCOTT

The United Nations is a failure. That's the opinion of Dr. Hans Kelsen, professor of political science at the University of California, as expressed Thursday night at a public lecture in Fenton Hall. "This is evident," Dr. Kelsen commented, "since the allies are split into two hostile camps by the cold war. The problem of peace can be solved only by international law."

The political scientist interpreted international law as being international courts which would hand down compulsory decisions.

"Such courts," Kelsen explained, "would be established by international agreement and would bind member nations only with an obligation to submit all disputes to the court and abide by all decisions made by the court."

"Nations must realize that they would have nothing to lose, for the court could have no other power than to apply existing international law."

Dr. Kelsen feels that the United Nations has become ineffectual in allowing the expulsion of members, the use of the veto power to the five great powers, and in its method of settling international disputes.

"There would be no chance for such fallacies in an international court," he said. "The effectiveness of the court would be exerted by moral, not physical, force, and a nation wants to appear moral in the eyes of the world."

"Above all, the court's judges would not represent political parties. They would merely be the world's best administrators of justice."

Kelsen admitted that a great many difficulties must be overcome to get universal approval of such a plan, but he is certain there will be no peace until such a plan is enacted.

"International courts are the germ cell of international peace," the Cal lecturer asserted. "We must fight to convince the public of this."

Graduate School Announces Five New Fellowships

Dean Eldon Johnson of the University Graduate School announced five new Carnegie Social Science fellows last week.

Wallace D. Farnham, Marko L. Haggard, Gladys Mae Jackson, Lester B. McAllister Jr., and Frank W. Nueber were chosen from 60 applications from 21 states and China received by the graduate school this year.

The fellowships call for a doctoral degree with emphasis on college-level teaching in the social science field.

The five fellows come from the Mid-West and New York.

World Government Broadcast Subject

Dr. Paul S. Dull, professor of history and political science participated in a discussion Friday over KERG on "World Government: United World Federalists vs. the Atlantic Union."

The tape recorded broadcast consisted of questions which Dull and Ray Siegenthaler, chairman of the Eugene Council of World Affairs, directed at Sam Levering, vice-president of the United World Federalists.

In this first of several scheduled talks in Eugene, Levering concluded by stating that people have come to realize the necessity of world law enforcement and that World Federalism is the best means to that end.

Kleinsorge Elected President of Club

Dr. P. L. Kleinsorge, professor of economics, was elected president of the University Social Science Club at a recent meeting.

Other elected officers include J. M. Foskett, professor of sociology, vice-president, and R. A. Littman, professor of psychology, secretary-treasurer.
