

Duckie Tracks

The FBI has moved in on Duck Tracks. One rather large right-foot track at the beginning of the mile seems to match a left-foot track near the end of the same course, an official source disclosed last night. Authorities are foot-printing every man on campus in hopes that the culprit may be detected soon.

"It isn't that I object to having the boys use both feet," Coach Bill Flowerman explained, "but it seems unsportsmanlike to allow the posterior portion of the pedal extremities to contact the ground—the heels!"

Trackmen themselves had little to say. Some of them side-stepped the issue. Others goose-stepped, but they were careful to leave no tracks.

In discussing the meet, one especially bold young man hinted that the tape was red—or if not that, at least a livid pink. He said that he was writing to Senator McCarthy requesting an investigation.

Pole-vaulting has reached a new high as Ducats* readied for the PCC championship meet. Most of the lads were up in the air, metaphorically speaking, but the administration was expected to put the ceiling on before the next leap year.

Fencing has increased in popularity at Oregon this season. Picket-fencing has edged out lattice 3-2 in the University's Back Yard Derby. Barbed wire remains the favorite at Corvallis where it runs all around the pastures and occasionally gets tangled up with editorials.

MGM has signed a contract with Nylon, a popular guinea pig from the biology department. The company will claim exclusive rights to use Nylon for the new-look pigskin in its latest film version of "Rockne of Notre Dame."

Women who are seeking the lightweight championship title are urged to use the new Soda-Fountain Scales. A unique numbering system, beginning with 300 and decreasing to zero, makes it possible to get a winning low score without cutting the calories.

As this edition goes to press, the University Whoopsters are whooping in raucus style. Some of them feel this version of Duckie Tracks is the work of a quack—one of those Punion Derby perfectionists who has spent too much time among the foot-notes. But we know you'll read them.

*Where there are tracks, there must be feet. Where there are feet there must be notes. Footnote: Ducats—diminutive for Ducks; or, more popularly, gold coins. Cf. Chakespeare, "Oh my daughter! Oh my Ducats."

Women's IM Rassling Newest Thing on Quad

RINGSIDE, HENDRICKS PARK ARENA—Juanita "Crusher" Kraavajanovski, 237, of Gotta Getta Guy sorority, defeated Dodie "Can-guss Back" Calipygian, 216, of Spook house, in the opening match of the women's intramural wrestling season Wednesday.

The large crowd of wrestling fans was made up mostly of University students who frequent the park for the sheer excitement to be found in the sport.

Kraavajanovski, according to University sports writers, has had much wrestling experience here and in high school, and has learned to break even the most difficult holds.

Calipygian, on the other hand, is a freshman from a small town and has had little opportunity to build up her defensive tactics.

Kraavajanovski wore the conventional wrestler's tights in an off-tone chartreuse. Her fitted bodice was of champagne lace.

Between rounds, as she was smearing resin on her thumbs to rub in her opponent's eyes, she explained that she made the champagne lace herself, by dipping an old sheet into a vat of cheap, corrosive champagne until it had eaten just the right amount of holes in the sheet.

Calipygian wore clinging knee length tights of an exciting mauve shade, with a dainty trim of black lace around the cuffs.

Kraavajanovski pinned Calipygian to the mat early in the first round, but the referee discounted it, declaring that Kraavajanovski had illegally blown into her opponent's ear, momentarily distracting her.

Calipygian took the first fall with a series of bustle-breaking body slams followed by a sudden body press.

Fans booed their disapproval as Kraavajanovski took the second fall after one of her stays popped out, hitting her opponent in the face and momentarily blinding her.

Kraavajanovski took the third fall with an airplane spin and body press.

Just to show that there were no hard feelings, Calipygian later went to the Gotta Getta Guy sorority house to help the victor sew back some of the spangles which were torn from her tights during the match.

Order of 'O'

The Order of the 'O', young men's dancing and sewing society, will meet at noon today at the Pi Beta Phi house, President Pon Deterson announced yesterday. Plans for the annual maypole and hopscotch tournament will be discussed.

Latest Red-Hot Scoop Bulletin:

John Warren, former Webfoot basketball coach, is Oregon's new athletic director, according to department sources.
Leo A. Harris, the present athletic director, quit in a huff because someone questioned how he kept his records of work projects in the department.

It isn't known yet who the new basketball coach will be, but it's rumored that the new man has been for some time coaching the Marshfield high school team.
