Civil Service Sets Conference Here

United States Civil Service representatives will hold a confer-ence for students interested in job opportunities in the civil service on the campus Oct. 19, Graduate Placement Director Karl Onthank announced Wednesday.

The conference, now in its third year on the campus, has been scheduled during fall instead of winter term in order to present information to students before the fall and winter civil service exam-inations.

Occupational Accident Indicate Necessity of Better Safety Code

Occupational accidents in Amer-ica last year caused the deaths of some 16,000 workers, the in-jury of 2,000,000 more and econom-ic losses of $4,500,000,000, Mau-rice J. Tobin, Secretary of Labor and general chairman of the President's Conference on Indus-trial Safety, revealed in Wash-ington.

"The fact that the President of the United States has called a national conference on industrial safety," Secretary Tobin declared, "bears testimony to the gravity of this problem. It is true that there has been a 50 percent reduc-tion in occupational accidents in the past quarter of a century, and it is also true that the worker of today is safer at his job than in his home or on the street. How-ever, when every 32 minutes an American citizen encounters death on his job, and when every 16 sec-onds another worker suffers a dis-abling injury, it is time for em-ployers, employees and the gen-eral public to sit up and do some-thing about it."

Secretary Tobin pointed out that, according to statistics, more workers suffer disabling injuries between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning and between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon than dur-ing any other hours of the day, and added:

"An occupational accident, no matter what time of the day or night it occurs, is almost always a symptom of something wrong in the production process—some-thing wrong with the man, the machinery, the method, or the materials. Practically every indus-trial accident is evidence of a hazard in the working environ-ment, of inefficiency in supervi-sion, or lack of adequate training of employees.

"It is in the smaller business or plant that the influence of acci-dent prevention techniques is par-ticularly needed. Individually, the small business concern does not have a startling number of acci-dents during any one year. How-ever, considering all small busi-ness firms collectively, they re-port a greater number of acci-dents annually than the larger plants. I do not mean to say that management in smaller plants is less considerate, but rather to point out where general educa-tion can be especially helpful. Most big plants have safety specia-lists and accident prevention work-ers constantly on the job. The much more numerous small plants often must look to outside sources for help."

The "monstrous figure" of $4,-500,000 paid out annually in the name of occupational accidents, Secretary Tobin declared, does not include many other costs al-ways associated with occupa-tional accidents in the factory and on the farm. Since all costs must be included in the price the ultimate consumer pays for a product or service, occupational accident prevention "not only saves human suffering, but also helps every-body's pocketbook."

Students Have Interest in Bond Issue For November Vote, Says Byrne

University students as well as those enrolled in other Oregon State System of Higher Education institutions have a long-range in-terest in the obligation bond issue which will appear on the November ballot, Charles D. Byrne, chancellor of the State Board of Higher Edu-cation, stated Tuesday.

The following is a statement from the office of the chancellor:

The measure is the result of a legislative act that will enable the State Board of Higher Education to redeem and refund special reve-nue bonds and issue general obliga-tion bonds in their stead. What will that accomplish? A minimum sav-ing of $1,200,000 in interest pay-ments over the life of the bonds.

Five buildings are directly con-cerned. They are the Student Union and Carson Hall at the University; the Coliseum and Sackett Hall at Oregon State College; and Hunt Education. Estimates show that 400,000 could be saved on the Union Building over the life of the bonds.

In order to place the faith and credit of the State behind these building payments, a constitutional amendment is necessary. When ob-ligating the state's credit, the tax-ing power is required.

However we firmly believe it will not be necessary to levy any tax to pay off either the principal or in-terest on these building bonds. The money to pay off the bonds will come, as in the past, from the build-ing fee, dormitory receipts, special privilege charges, concessions, pro-ceeds from athletic events, and gifts. Over a period of a quarter century, the State Board has never failed to meet an interest or prin-cipal payment.

Weekend Rules Set For Women

All University women planning to stay overnight in Portland this weekend in hotels or at private homes were reminded Thursday by the Director of Women's Af-fairs that special permission is necessary.

Mrs. Edith Jacobs, women's counsellor, announced that all women whose weekend plans in-cluded overnights except at their own homes or those of their girl friends must have their parent's written permission for the specific nights on file with the director's office before leaving the campus.

Those women staying at the homes of friends must make cer-tain that their regular permission card signed by their parents is in the housemother's hands. These regulations are similar to those of the University in the past.

It's wise to apologize to a man if you're wrong—and to a woman if your right.
