

Reporter Learns Barry Mountain Busy Person as ASUO President

By Walt Graydon

If you can put your finger on one thing that dominates the life of Barry Mountain, it's being just plain busy.

As I approached the glass-fronted office of the ASUO president, I noticed that he was talking rapidly to another person. He didn't let me linger a minute, but waved me in and nodded me toward a chair.

I settled down and started to look over the office. The table next to me was piled high with Crusade for Freedom scrolls. My observations were cut short as Mountain turned in his chair, ready for my questions.

Busy Fellow

"I hear that you're pretty busy?" I asked as a feeler.

Mountain grinned and said, "That's not far from wrong, but I don't want anyone to get the idea that I'm running all over the campus like a madman, because I'm not. Actually I spend most of my time right here in this office."

Student Union Board, rallies, OSC game tickets, assemblies, Executive Council meetings—have all called for his attention. He said, "this could really be a full-time job."

Wants Progressive Government

"Of course," said the president, "I didn't realize how busy I would be when I was elected, but this University has an active building and expansion program going on which shows that the school is progressive. I want the student government to be just as progressive."

Mountain motioned a big fellow inside and they started talking. I gazed around waiting, suddenly I realized that he was answering my last question and that I had missed several phrases. He managed this two-way questioning for several minutes.

"We have established a new intra-mural program this year," he said, "that will give representation to the Intra-Fraternity Council and the Inter-Dorm Council and provide a closer method of liaison between these groups and the directors.

"We have also planned to hold periodic banquets for all house presidents and key members of the administration so anyone with a gripe can get it straightened out."

"And another thing, we want to revive more of the University's tradition before it's just history," he added.

The telephone rang; Mountain began talking and checking a list and still kept answering my question. (He was scheduled to leave for Portland 20 minutes later to make last minute arrangements for the California game.)

Mixed Up In Everything

"If you want a summary of what I'm doing," he said, "it would be something like this:

Wherever there is something going on that concerns the students, I'm mixed up in it. There's lots of things that we can do for the students."

This is Mountain's senior year, and he's majoring in political science. He's carrying 12 hours this term and is attending all of his classes; however, he hasn't had time to go through the formal registration procedure yet.

As I left the president's office, he said, "Drop in anytime—this office is open to everyone. I should have a schedule posted next week indicating when I will be there."

Mother's Tea Set Saturday in Eugene

The Portland Mother's Tea will be held in Eugene Saturday, Oct. 21. Scholarship plans will be discussed at that time including those such as the Erb Memorial Scholarship endowment fund. Mrs. Owen Bentley of Portland is the president.

All Oregon mothers in the Eugene area are invited.

Draft Causes Few House Vacancies

All fraternities on the campus are in a better position than anticipated because of vacancies caused by the draft, according to Ray Hawk, director of men's affairs.

Only two houses have a great many vacancies and they are in good financial condition so will not suffer greatly until the vacancies can be filled, Hawk said.

Filing Space Open For Organizations

Campus organizations wishing to obtain filing space in the Student Union may secure application blanks from Program Director Olga Yevtich, room 301.

Space will be assigned upon approval of the Student Union Board.

Each file drawer holder will be given a separate key to his space. The filing room contains tables, chairs, and a typewriter.

Five New Patients Under Treatment

Five new victims were claimed by the infirmary Wednesday. These are Roewade Jensen, Carol Leonard, Margaret Schamp, James Watkins, and Robert Zeagler.

Still "infirm" are Anne Goodman, Suzanne Cocheram, Wallace Humphries, James Stephens, and Dennis Sullivan.
