

Speaking Opportunities Discussed by Symposium

Opportunities for student speakers to address clubs and schools throughout the state were revealed Tuesday night at a meeting of the symposium group in Villard.

Participants in extra-curricular speech engagements are taken from this group. The requirements for membership are an interest in public speaking and willingness to do research work.

In explaining the philosophy behind speaking experience Herman Cohen, co-director of forensics, said, "Besides improving one's effectiveness in meeting the public, it will aid in developing an open and analytical point of view and helps to gain understanding of today's problems."

Full Schedule Ahead

Although speakers face a full schedule of 50 to 75 engagements during winter and spring terms, it has been planned so that each appearance will offer chances to meet the audiences and get acquainted with all types of people in the northwest and California.

Each student must be prepared to speak on "The Columbia Valley Administration" and either "The Welfare State" or "An International Alliance of Non-Communist Nations." Clubs desiring to hear University orators can specify their choice of these subjects.

Main Types Listed

Debate, oratory, symposium, and extemporaneous speaking will be the main types; but W. A. Dahlberg, who presided over the meeting with Cohen, stressed that "Any GI's, foreign students, or pupils with unusual experiences are invited to join the speaker's bureau, a supplementary group of the symposium, and will have opportunities to appear, all expenses paid, before church clubs, service organizations, and schools in and around Oregon."

Another attraction to promising orators is choosing of two speakers to attend the convention of Delta Sigma Rho, debate honorary next April, in Chicago.

Sans Wimmin; UO Men Don't Call It Living

By Larry Hobart

What are men without women? Dateless! That's what the men polled today said, when asked for their opinion concerning the new restrictions on freshman women pledges. The women, blushing, modest creatures, for the most part approved of this addition to their already sheltered existence.

Al Riasanovsky—senior in liberal arts—"A darn silly idea!"

Donna Beddle—freshman in liberal arts—"I can't see that it will do anyone any good."

Al Benson—freshman in business administration—"I think that it's rough on the men, but good for the women."

Jack Gitcheil—sophomore in business administration—"I think that they're nuts!"

Pete Quinn—freshman in business administration—"A poor idea. Freshmen girls only get out two nights a week now and the new rules give them even less time with the boys."

Joanne Hite—sophomore in liberal arts—"I think that the rules are pretty fair. The study rules are good. I think that they should be able to go to dinner at their houses at least once a week."

Jack Reading—senior in business administration—"I think that they are too stringent. While dorm relationships should be held up, I think that they should be allowed more time at their sororities."

Fashion Flashes

By Barbara Fagg

Plaid, plaid, and more plaid is adding a definitely Scotch look to the campus this fall—and a mighty smart look too.

Finely pleated all-round plaid skirts are showing themselves as top favorites. Because in most cases the pleats are baked in, there is no chance of their "sitting out."

Plaid belts with shoes to match are also top news. They make last year's skirt and sweater look like a completely new outfit, and what could be more practical for the college girl on a budget?

Plaid blouses and coats and plaid trim on suits, coats, and dresses are also new and smart. Not to be outdone, clothes for the male segment of the population are turning to a new and gay look with not only plaid shirts, but plaid jackets and sport coats being featured in the "latest fall collections" and on the campus.

Librarians To Elect

Vice-president and secretary will be elected at a meeting of all house librarians at 4 p. m. today in the browsing room of the Student Union.

Freedom Crusade Sign-up Lags

Crusade for Freedom scrolls had received signatures from less than 40 per cent of the University student body, as of 3 p. m. Wednesday, ASUO President Barry Mountain announced.

The drive is aimed at securing pledges from a full 100 per cent of the students. By Wednesday only 1,900 of an estimated 5,000 students had signed the scrolls.

Several living organizations have promised donations for the Voice of Freedom radio station in Western Europe. A total of $15 has been turned in to the ASUO office thus far.

Restaurants blame television for a seven per cent drop in business. Some people seem to be making TV a steady diet.

Lot of folks don't know enough to learn as much as they lead their friends to think they know.

Seventy per cent of the members of t prison band were paroled before their terms were up. Even in the pen, peace is a blessing.
