

Korean Reds Flee From U.N. Forces

Compiled by John Barton
From the wires of Associated Press

North Korean Communists are fleeing before advancing United Nations forces today in oxcarts and on foot—any way to get away from the powers of democracy which are sweeping toward the Manchurian border and the end of the Korean war.

At one point today, South Korean troops are about 30 miles from that border. About five divisions of U. N. troops are slashing toward the Yalu river. Most are South Korean troops.

Communist Chinese Fired . . .

. . . upon an American F-51 Wednesday with anti-aircraft weapons. And the U. S. plane was three miles south of the border between Korea and Red China. The pilot of the plane was forced to land his craft at sea. He was picked up by a U. N. naval craft.

That's the second time Red Chinese have shot at U. S. planes. They did it Monday when two Marine fighters, 20 miles from the border, received token bursts from the Commies. The Marines were not hit.

U. N. planes in Korea are usually confined to an area 20 miles or more from the border. They are to go nearer only on specific missions, according to the air force

U. N. Secretary Lie . . .

. . . will be rehired when his term runs out in February if U. S. Delegate Warren R. Austin has anything to say about it.

Austin reportedly told a secret meeting of the security council yesterday that he would "actively oppose" election of anyone but Trygve Lie as U. N. secretary general.

This means, of course, that the U. S. would use its veto power if any other candidate should win a council majority. Russia is currently supporting candidates from India and Asia for the job.

Use of Atomic Weapons . . .

. . . to stop aggression by any nation is perfectly justified, says Australian Foreign Minister Percy C. Spender. He added that the aggression itself is the worst crime against humanity which could be undertaken. Spender says the way of the aggressor must be made hard. The Stockholm appeal, he says, is a "piece of international fraud." This document calls for the outlawing of atomic weapons.

Unifying Germany . . .

. . . under a Soviet bloc proposal, has been rejected by U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson. The proposal was made Saturday after a two-day meeting at Prague of Russia's Molotov and foreign ministers of seven Red satellite nations. It calls for the same old line of disarming Western Germany.

Guided Missile Production . . .

. . . may begin on a large scale before long. Washington experts predicted that may happen with the appointment of K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler corporation, as director of guided missiles. Appointment was made by Secretary of Defense George Marshall.

This position is a new one established by Marshall in his own office. Keller is an expert on production and engineering problems. There is no official indication, however, that mass production of guided missiles will start. But they've been in the experimental stage for a long time.

Al Jolson's Estate . . .

. . . is said to be around five million dollars. New York Columnist Earl Wilson says about one million of it is going to New York University, City College of New York and Columbia University. Theatrical magazine Variety says Jolson left much of his estate to charity. The money will go, says the magazine, to Catholic, Jewish and Protestant charities, as well as educational institutions.

Many specific bequests of Jolson's will are marked for needy students at the colleges named above.

Maj. Gen. William F. Dean . . .

. . . is a closed subject, at the request of U. S. Eighth army headquarters in Japan. The army has asked newsmen to "withhold any information relating to" the missing general. He was captured in action July 20 during the Korean war, it is supposed. Many rumors as to his whereabouts have been floating about since then.

Dr. Ralph Bunche . . .

. . . United Nations official and Nobel peace prize winner, is now a professor of government at Harvard University. The announcement of his appointment last January was made yesterday by Harvard officials. Bunche was awarded the Nobel peace prize for his mediation work in the Palestine controversy.

Universal Military Training . . .

. . . has again been advocated by President Truman this time before the National Guard association's meeting yesterday. Truman dropped in for an informal, chatty session and said he has asked Congress for UMT eight times with no success. He will try again, and he wants the Guard's support.

Tuesday Night's Storm . . .

. . . which slapped the campus, was felt hardest around Puget Sound and other British Columbia and Washington coastal areas. Winds up to 60 miles an hour were recorded. But this time the Tacoma Narrows bridge, wrecked once before by a 43 MPH wind, was quite steady with no sway observed.

Austin Flegel Was Accused . . .

. . . of telling a "plain, deliberate, intentional falsehood," last night by Governor Douglas McKay in a speech over a Portland radio station. Flegel had stated that the governor is influenced by special interests and pressure groups. Not so, says McKay.

Lumbago means the blood is poor, says a doctor. And this time of year, that the lawn needs cutting.

Do You Know a Rumor--- when you hear one?

During the war we knew enough to mistrust rumors and particularly knew how dangerous it was to spread them. We knew then that rumors affected our unity, and unity was vital to winning the war.

But perhaps we don't know that rumors are just as dangerous today as they were during the war.

Because—rumors about other groups, other religions and other races always threaten our national unity—without which we cannot hope to survive.

Be an active citizen—help keep your country strong, united and secure—a good place in which men can live together, prosper together and pursue happiness together.

Make sure that you are not spreading rumors against a race or religion. Speak up, wherever you are, against prejudice, and work for better understanding. Remember that's being a good American.
