BA School Shift Lessens Majors

In answer to questions relative to the decrease of enrollment of majors in the School of Business Administration, Dean Victor P. Morris calls attention to the fact that the B. A. school has shifted to an upper division and graduate school basis.

This means that all freshmen and sophomore business school majors are now officially majors in the College of Liberal Arts.

"Consequently," says Morris, for the B.A. school represents only juniors and seniors and does not include any freshmen and sophomores."

It is believed by Morris that the shift to the upper division basis will mean an increased emphasis on liberal arts in the beginning two years, and an increased emphasis on B. A. school subjects in the junior and senior years.

At the present time figures are unavailable as to the exact decrease this year, but Dean Morris adds that the B. A. school this year has the largest number of graduate students that it has ever had.

Placement Office Has Applications For Exam

Arrangements have been made for the Junior Professional exams, according to the Graduate Placement Office. Applications may be obtained at the office and they are due Nov. 15 at the Civil Service Regional office in Seattle.
