

DUCK TRACKS

By PETE CORNACCHIA
Emerald Sports Editor

"If we just had a little more time" is a very futile excuse, a dodge worth little more than the present price of a ticket to the past Oregon-USC contest at Los Angeles. Still, Jim Aiken's Webfoots were very likely consoling each other in such terms as they trudged off the Coliseum's shadowed turf Saturday afternoon.

After watching that late spurt in the final quarter, we're inclined to believe the Oregons would have pulled ahead of the Trojans if a few more minutes were available. Coach Jeff Cravath's men appeared to have shot their pooled wad in that terrible third quarter, while the Ducks were well plucked but still waddling.

Right about here, however, you're probably wondering if we've heard the story about the dog and why he didn't catch his rabbit. Now that you bring it up, we wonder if that particular booch stopped for his "paws that refreshes" in the third quarter. It would be interesting to count how many times we've lost football games in the third period during the past few years. There must be some reason for this, but who has the answer?

Same Men—Two Teams

Oregon certainly was represented by two completely different teams during the afternoon. One stayed right with USC for three quarters, while the other dropped feathers all over the sun-drenched turf in that Terrible Third. Both teams were composed of the same personnel. The biggest reason we can find for the letdown was the absence of Earl Stelle after his injury late in the second quarter. In our opinion, Earl was turning in one of the best games of his career until he was bumped on the noggin. His mates took too long in deciding they could do anything without him—both on offense and defense.

New Help

Durable Dick Daugherty has been the big brick in the defensive wall for the Ducks all season, so the great job he did against the Trojans was something we've come to take for granted. The same goes for Dick Patrick. Several loud grunts from the partisan crowd were fitting tribute to the vicious, driving tackles made by the pair of fine linebackers.

While these men were performing well along the line of scrimmage, a pair of non-lettermen juniors were doing themselves proud in the secondary. Jack Countryman not only did a lot to stop several USC drives but set up both of the Duck touchdowns in the final period. He intercepted Quarterback Ed Demirjian's pass on the Oregon 11 and ran it back to the 44 to pave the way for the first one, and made a shoe-string catch of a line drive punt before returning it 32 yards to the enemy 23 to start the drive for the final score. The 158-pound speedster nearly went all the way with both returns.

Emile Holeman, too, inserted himself between numerous Trojan passes and their intended receivers. A comforting thought is the fact these men will be around next season.

Van Likes Brethauer

Norm Van Brocklin sat with us in the pressbox Saturday, and the great quarterback for the Los Angeles Rams was impressed by the work of Monte Brethauer. Van Brocklin said he anticipated considerable trouble from the Detroit Lions, who were to meet the Rams the next day in the Coliseum, although former Notre Dame giant Leon Hart was among the least of his worries. Was Glenn Davis getting any slower? Not so's you could notice. Davis, by the way, contributed five bucks to the former Oregon quarterback after picking Troy to win by 21 points or more.

Van neglected to mention he would pass to five touchdowns and score once himself Sunday in leading the 65-24 rout of the Lions. He connected on 13 of his 17 tries for 293 yards.

We also saw Woodley Lewis and Win Wright, members of Oregon's conference co-champion eleven in 1948. Lewis is still a valuable teammate to Van Brocklin, on defense now—where he intercepted two passes Sunday against the Lions.

Oliver at Fullerton

Tex Oliver, football coach at Oregon before Jim Aiken, was another visitor to the pressbox. He wanted to know why Bob Anderson hadn't made the trip. Told that the big end had been kept home by injuries, Oliver expressed disappointment and said he had been anxious to see "a boy who showed me great possibilities when I was up there" in action. Oliver, whose Webfoot teams won 23 and lost 28 during his six years at Eugene, has returned to coaching after a venture in the insurance business. A single-ring man while at Oregon, he uses both this power formation and the T at Fullerton JC, a team which has won four and dropped two.

University 'Quiz Kids' Display Amazing Brilliance over KOAC

By Marilyn Patterson

What were the names of the two men who sang with Bing Crosby in the Rhythm Boys trio? Who said, "I could run on a laundry ticket and still beat him in the election."?

Don't shove a bowling ball in your hip pocket and jump into the millrace if you can't answer those questions. They were addressed to the University "quiz kids," Betsy Eggen, Mary Hall, Jo DeLap, Gordon Ericksen, Don Dimick, and Ernie Jaqua Wednesday over the KOAC student program, "The Voice Is Familiar."

Fragments of speeches by celebrities were played before the panel, the men trying to beat the women (and vice versa) in identifying the voice. Then a question was asked about the personality, and whichever side gave the correct answer received all the points, even if they hadn't recognized the voice first.

The "brain trust" exhibited amazing brilliance. Gordon Ericksen, in response to the query, "Who is Alben Barkley's wife," retorted with a quick flash of genius, "Mrs. Barkley."

Don Porter, KUGN announcer, was master of ceremonies and, occasionally, referee. Proving that the females may possibly be the weaker sex mentally, he scored the male side 36 points and the women only 15.

UO Students Pay $36 Per Year For SU Support

University of Oregon students are now paying $36 a year to the support of the Student Union. Where does that money go? Here is the breakdown, according to Dick Williams, Student Union director.

Twenty-four dollars is set aside for the redeeming of bonds.

Twelve dollars goes into the actual running of the SU and for the support of educational activities. Those areas of the Student Union which are non-revenue producing are assisted through this fund.

The majority of salaries paid to SU employees come out of the $12 sum. A part of the $12 supports the Oregon Daily Emerald, Oregana, the University band, choral union, and other such organizations which come under the heading of educational activities.

Oregon's SU fee is slightly higher than those of some other college unions. However, the Oregon SU provides for a larger program than most unions.

The SU, on any campus, is essentially a non-profit organization working for the students. Income earned is used to improve the existing program.

Jobs in Canal Zone Open to Graduates

Job opportunities are available for college graduates through the Inter-American Geodetic Survey, headquarters in the Canal Zone, the graduate placement office announced Thursday.

Applicants with civil engineering degrees are preferred but those with degrees in mathematics, physics, forestry, architectural engineering, geology, and similar fields will be considered.

Further information may be obtained at the graduate placement office in Emerald hall.

Huskies Ask Ducks To 'Victory' Mixer

All University of Oregon students are invited to attend the "Big Victory Celebration" open house and mixer at the Husky Union Building in Seattle, Washington, on November 11, Alyce Rae Felt, mixer committee secretary, informed the Emerald this week.

Signs will be posted to direct students from the stadium to the Hub after the UW-UO game. Refreshments will be available in the cafeteria.

UO-USC Movies Set for 6:30 in SU

Movies of the USC-Oregon football game, played Saturday in Los Angeles, will be shown in the Student Union ballroom tonight at 6:30.

Ed Peterson, Student Union Board member, will introduce Darrell Robinson, ticket manager of the athletic department. Jerry Lillie, assistant football coach, will report on scouting Washington State College; and Jim Aiken, head football coach, will narrate during the film.

This film is the sixth in a series of 10 sponsored by the Student Union Board in co-operation with the University Athletic Department. On November 7 the Homecoming game will be featured.

The complete program is an hour long, and all students, faculty and staff members are invited to attend.

Rally Scheduled For Wednesday

In preparation for Saturday's Homecoming battle with Washington State, a Homecoming rally assembly will be held at 11:15 a.m. Wednesday in the Student Union Ballroom.

Plans are not yet complete for the rally which will take the place of the usual pre-game Thursday rally. ASUO President Barry Mountain announced that details would be forthcoming Tuesday and will be printed in Wednesday's Emerald.

The regular assembly schedule will be followed.

The month of June will have five Fridays, which is nothing for fish to look forward to.

Sale of Buttons For Homecoming Now Over 2,000

Over two thousand Homecoming buttons have been sold by the finance committee. Sales were carried on downtown last week and began officially on the campus Monday.

Members of Phi Theta and Kwama will sell buttons at dinner hours tonight. The buttons are ten cents and the theme for this year is "beat 'em with buttons." Sales will begin in the Co-op Wednesday under the direction of Jean Gould.

Sales will be made to alumni at registration booths Friday and Saturday. Houses in charge of selling buttons at the booths are Gamma Phi Beta, Zeta Tau Alpha, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Alpha Omicron Pi.

Five thousand buttons will be the quota for Homecoming sales. The money received will help to finance Homecoming. Advance publicity was provided on the campus last week by Barbara Booth, flying speech chairman.

Oregana Needs Artistic Ad Man

Wanted, by the Oregana staff: a person who has combined art work with some knowledge of advertising and layout.

Mac McClure, advertising manager, sent out a call Monday for such a person to work in the year-book advertising department.

Applicants will be welcomed at the Oregana office from 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. McClure requests that they bring samples of their work.

The advertising artist will work on a new type of advertising section for this year's book.

Eleven Pledged By Sororities In 'Spot Rushing'

Eleven women pledged campus sororities Monday following a two week informal "spot rushing" period by a few of the houses, it was announced yesterday by the Office of Student Affairs.

New pledges are Jill Chisholm, Donna Claire Ringle, and Lola Strong, Alpha Delta Pi; Mary Linn Cooper and Pat Ritchie, Alpha Gamma Delta; Suzanne Pfister, Linda Stoop, Elaine Rempel, Mary Taormino, and Jane Layman, Sigma Kappa; and Sue Judd, Gamma Phi Beta.
