

Chinese Regiment Slows UN Advance

Compiled by John Barton
From the Wires of Associated Press

Communist China may be intervening in the Korean war. Reports from the front that a full Chinese Red regiment is fighting with North Korean forces indicate this. At any rate, the Korean war today is not going as well as it has for United Nations forces.

Two Red Divisions. . .

... reportedly including Chinese Commies, are driving toward the Korean east coast city of Hamhung, former chemical center. At last report yesterday, they were about 30 miles from the city and driving hard. About 10,000 men are in the Red force. Just how many are Chinese is still a question.

South Koreans Being Trapped. . .

... is a strong possibility today. The Red attack (being called a counter-attack) is smashing through the flank of the South Korean 26th Regiment. United States tanks and mobile artillery are rushing to help ROK forces stave off the onrushing Reds. All South Korean forces today are either fighting at a standstill or retreating, some in confusion after heavy losses. Those ROK forces which dashed so close to the Manchurian border last week may be trapped by the Reds if the latter's attack isn't stopped quickly.

No Report About Red Chinese. . .

... fighting with Communists in organized force (not as individuals) has been received by the defense department in Washington. Department spokesmen noted, however, that army dispatches from the field are often hours behind press reports, so confirmation of Chinese intervention in the war may be forthcoming. What it will mean in Korea, and on the floor of the U.N. assembly, is anyone's guess.

Revolt in Puerto Rico. . .

... is going full blast today. Nationalist insurgents have attacked the governor's palace and police stations in various towns throughout the little United States island territory. Reason: they want the U.S. to get out.

Death counts up to last night reached about 23, counting police and dead nationalists. Government officials in San Juan, the capital, say there is no Communist influence in the revolt.

Government police say they have crushed the rebellion. The organized uprising is aimed at embarrassing the administration of Governor Luis Munoz Marin. This administration is pledged to keep the island as a possession of the United States. The Nationalists want complete independence.

Another Beating for Russia. . .

... developed yesterday in the U.N. security council. The council voted to send the problem of getting a new secretary general to the general assembly, where no veto can stand in the way. Russia says no. The dispute lies around present secretary Trygve Lie, whom the U.S. and other powers want re-elected in February. Russia wants a new man.

And to show he isn't kidding, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky says that the "Soviet Union will have no truck with" Lie if the general assembly extends his term when it expires in February. Russia will not recognize Lie if he is elected legally.

The Russ Were Also Beaten. . .

... in their attempt to get the political committee of the U.N. to declare that the first nation to use an atomic bomb be branded a war criminal. Vote: 5 in favor, 35 against, 18 abstaining.

France is Still Getting Beaten. . .

... in Indochina, and the British in Singapore are getting worried about it. Further Communist victories or gains in Indochina, they feel, will cause more Red terrorism in Malaya. And Malaya, of course, would be a choice target for any Red aggression in Asia. The peninsula is rich in oil, rubber and other resources. The French are still evacuating forces from the frontier bastion of Laukay by air lift. The airport there, 100 miles from the nearest French outpost, was closed by vicious Commie attacks, but it's open now, and the French are rushing to get their forces out.

Russia Won't Start a War. . .

... in the near future, according to Emanuel Shinwell, British minister of defense. Shinwell made his statements yesterday before the national press club in Washington. He said there is no evidence at this time to support the theory that Russia is ready to enter an armed conflict. Shinwell is in Washington for meetings of the Atlantic Powers Defense Committee.

Copper for Red China. . .

... was shipped from Japan and then clear around the world, according to information being unfolded before Senate investigators. This happened during the past year. The committee is investigating reports (many substantiated) of shipments of strategic materials to Red China during past months.

A Million Dollars. . .

The particular shipment discussed yesterday was of over four million pounds of pure copper. And testimony revealed that the Chinese Communists went to extensive trouble to get the material, showing they need it for something—probably not plow-shares.

New Point System for Army Reserves. . .

... is to guide the army's induction of civilian reservists in the future. The system is based on number of dependents, age, previous services, etc. And at the same time over the weekend, the army announced that it will call no more reserves in the near future, except for limited number of medical and counter intelligence specialists. But spokesmen didn't say how long these orders would stand.

... has been spent by three major Republican organizations in the current election campaign, according to a report by the organization to the clerk of the House of Representatives. The reports must be made, according to law. The sum of over a million dollars is about $70,000 more than the organizations took in. Oregon's Senator Wayne Morse was allocated $2,500.

Students Favor Homecoming Traditions

By Larry Hobart

What do you think about the traditions instituted during Homecoming Week?

Faced with the possibility of being either paddled or dunked, students who were asked this question not too surprisingly voiced approval of the traditions to be enforced during Homecoming Week. The major portion of the students questioned favored the restrictions imposed on the student body for the week-long festivities and hailed them as a means of promoting Oregon spirit.

Al Packer—freshman in pre-dentistry "I don't mind wearing a rooter's lid as long as it rains."

Dick Lynch—junior in economics "I think that it's a lot of foolishness. It's OK for kids just out of high school, but not for upperclassmen."

Sue Korkrey—freshman in interior design—"Keeping traditions is a part of college life, and I'd sure hate to be dunked."

Nicky Haralu—graduate student in psychology—"I'm a foreign student from India and new to the campus. We don't have anything like this at home. I'd like to see the traditions working before I say anything."

science—"I don't they're all right."

Ray Conion—senior in political Traditions make college something more than cold books and classrooms."

Sally Thurston—freshman in PE—"Green hair ribbons don't look too sharp on me. Actually I think it's a fine policy because it builds up freshman spirit."

Jim Bobson—sophomore in architecture—"I think the "Hello Walk" idea is good. I don't like to wear cords anyway."

Barbara Callender—freshman in interior design—"I think that they are a lot of fun. Everyone should follow them. They give variety to campus life."

Bud Barber—sophomore in business administration—"The traditions are good. They help promote class spirit and co-operation which is greatly lacking at the present time. These traditions should definitely be enforced among both Greeks and Independents."

Richard Laing—graduate student in general studies—"What justification do homecoming traditions have? Someone show me how paddling or being dunked inspires a great spirit for the Alma Mater and I'll concede the point."

Permanent Activity File To Benefit UO Students

By Walt Graydon

With the coming of summer, there's a good chance that draft boards will move in and snatch many fine, upstanding young students.

Suppose that Fred Frighter is one of them. Of course you don't know him, but he's just an average fellow.

Fred's always got his eye open for a good deal, so he applies for Officers Candidate School. But alas, there are hundreds of others just like him.

He comes before the board of examiners. They look at his U. of O. transcript. Average grades, English major—not much to go on there. But, what's this? Attached to his transcript they find as part of his record his permanent activity file. He was chairman of many committees, president of half a dozen other things, high school leader.

He doesn't have to make any claims about his leadership experience, he has the proof! Fred's on his way to O. C. S.

This was made possible because the activity file was put into effect at the U. of O. shortly after Homecoming in 1950. The idea and the plans were a product of the Executive Council, and here's how they worked:

A two-page questionnaire was

Everyone interested in activities filled one out. This became the permanent file in the ASUO office.

The next petition was of the conventional type that required a complete list of activities. This was added to the file and kept up to date. All petitions after that only required your name and suggestions. Chairmen had all of this complete information to ponder over when they picked a committee. They knew who they were choosing and all about him.

This file was part of your official record. It's not only valuable for military recommendation, but job appointments as well.

Incidentally, Homecoming for 1950 has not yet passed. Don't forget to fill out your permanent file when the material arrives. It should be distributed in about two weeks.
