Newman Club Gets First Chaplain; Corvallis Reverend Appointed

By Adeline Garbarino
He's not very big, but he has a way of getting things done.

That's The Rev. Leo J. Linahen, newly appointed Newman Club chaplain. This is the first time Catholic students at the University have had a full-time chaplain strictly their own.

Formerly of St. Mary's parish in Corvallis, Father Linahen isn't new at this business of directing youth groups, having been connected with several young people's clubs in both Corvallis and Portland.

Succeeds Linehan

He succeeds The Rev. Jerry Linehan, who was chaplain last year, and who is now stationed at St. Mary's parish in Eugene.

Speaking of Newman Club, Father Linahen says the regular meetings, held at 7 p.m. Sundays in Gerlinger Annex, will consist of a short business meeting, and educational feature, a question and answer session on the general subject of the Church, and an entertainment item.

"You leave when you want to, or have to," he continued, "but there are refreshments and dancing when the formal part of the meeting is over. We close up show at 10."

Father Linahen first studied for the priesthood at Columbia Prep in Portland. He continued his theological training at regional seminaries in the Archdiocese of San Francisco, and later attended colleges in Rome, where he was ordained in 1932.

He holds the master's degree in theology from the Propagande University in Rome and one from the Georgian University. He holds the degree of doctor of canon law, and has done two years' graduate work at the University of St. Thomas in Rome. He has taken additional graduate work at the Catholic University in Washington, D. C.
