

Station Calls For Program Suggestions

Ideas are needed for KWAX broadcasts, according to Dick Hardie, program director of the new station. Anyone with suggestions is invited to see Hardie from 3-5 p.m. daily on the third floor Villard.

"If a person wishes to write a show, get music for it, and even cast and rehearse it, we will be glad to give him an audition. However, any ideas are welcomed and needn't be as fully developed," said Hardie.

Disk jockey programs will be featured on the new station, but the number is limited. Students may sign up today on a schedule at the studios for disk jockey appointments.

"Since we will be operating six days a week and eight hours daily, an extensive program list must be compiled by winter term. This is the campus station, and we hope students will take part in offering suggestions," Hardie added.

Some types of programs are interviews, discussions, poetry readings, musical and variety shows, and quiz programs.

ROTC Rifle Team Wins First Match

The Air Force ROTC rifle team won its first match of the year by one point Nov. 10 from the University of North Carolina, according to results received Monday.

The contest was a result of a challenge initiated by North Carolina.

Four positions were fired in the match, prone, sitting, standing, and kneeling. The University team amassed a total of 1708 while the University of North Carolina garnered 1707.

Major S. E. Sheffield is manager of the team this year. Students who participated in the match were Robert Essig, Lee Trippett, Norman Fugitt, Wilford Nasshalm, and Harold Wedemeyer.

A postal match was also fired Nov. 17 with Oregon State and the University of Washington. The results of this postal match are still being awaited.

Student Gripe Boxes Remain Victims of Circumstances

Monday's action by the Executive Council was another step in the culmination of events that have taken place for over a year concerning suggestion boxes.

Here's what happened to the project last year, according to Virginia Wright, junior representative on the Executive Council:

The project was started during fall term, 1949. Ron Brown, sophomore representative on the Executive Council, was put in charge. We probably would have had two boxes now, said Miss Wright, but Brown was injured in an automobile accident and forced to withdraw from school.

Wright Was in Charge

Miss Wright, then sophomore representative, was put in charge of the project. She said that she couldn't locate the boxes that Brown had planned, so she had two new ones made. Then came the problem of having them installed.

"I went to I. I. Wright, physical plant superintendent, to get permission to have them put up," said Miss Wright. "He sent me to Lyle Nelson, then director of information, to get his O.K."

"But elections came about that time and I forgot all about the boxes," she explained.

Cook Takes Over

Herb Cook, sophomore representative, is handling the job now. Said Cook, "I'm going to try and get one put in the Co-op and the other in the Student Union by Monday, but first reports from the Union indicate that the box will have to be located on the third floor."

Cook said that the library would also be a good spot if the Co-op or the Union objected to the installation of a box. He is also going to change the name on the boxes from "Suggestion Box" to "Gripe Box" which was the name decided upon by the Executive Council.

Kwama Starts Campus Survey

"Factors Influencing Students to Enroll as Freshmen at the University of Oregon" is the title of a survey being conducted this week and next by Kwama, sophomore women's service honorary.

According to Albert Hopkins, executive assistant to President Newburn, results from the survey will be used by the University's Division of Information. From these results factors bringing students to the Oregon campus will be determined. They will also serve as an approach to attracting more students to Oregon, said Hopkins.

Freshmen women are being contacted in their living organizations by groups of two or more Kwamas. A personal element is being emphasized by those conducting the survey to obtain the basic reasons for attending the University. If successful, a similar survey will be given to men students winter term.

This is the second time this term Kwama has contacted freshmen women as a whole. In October petitioning and activities were explained to them.

Transfers, YWCA Set Dec. 5 Dinner

Upperclass women who transferred to Oregon fall term will be guests at an informal dinner sponsored by the YWCA upperclass commission, at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in the YWCA, Gerlinger.

Each commission member will invite two transfer women to the dinner, the purpose of which is to better acquaint new students with the YWCA and the campus.

Entertainment, including a skit on campus traditions, will be a part of the dinner program, Barbara Burke, chairman, announced.

Tickets at 25 cents, will be available at the YWCA, today and Friday. Any upperclass women who has been contacted may inquire at the YWCA, Karla Van Loan, upperclass commission chairman, said.

"The dinner will provide an opportunity to relax and get acquainted just for fun," Miss Van Loan commented.

Yost Announces Committee Petitions

Students may now petition for work on Religious Evaluation Week committees, George Yost, chairman for the week, announced Wednesday. The annual affair will be held January 21-24.

Chairmen and committee members are being called for host and hostess committee, assembly committee, publicity, secretarial committee, and fireside-promotion.

Petitions may be turned in to George Yost at Campbell club or Olga Yevtich in the Educational Activities Office of the Student Union until Dec. 8.

Schleiche Speaks To Group Today

"The Structure of the United Nations" will be the topic of P. Schleicher, professor of political science, in his address to the symposium group at 4 p.m. today in the Student Union.

The United Nations is a relevant subject in studying the present fare state, one of the topics chosen for research by the symposium group. After compiling information, they will have speaking engagements throughout the state before civic, church, and school audiences.

Anyone interested in hearing Schleicher's speech is invited to attend this meeting, Hermon Coen, symposium adviser, stated.

Bridge Lessons Slated Tonight

Second in a series of bridge lessons sponsored by the Student Union Board will be held at 6 p.m. today in the Student Union. Any interested students may attend.

Beginners and advanced players will be divided into two sections tonight, Steve Englemann, member of the SU Board's recreation committee, said.

Bob Bosley, graduate student in math, will instruct advanced players, while Englemann will be in charge of the beginners' section. Lectures on bidding and playing are planned tonight, with practice lessons scheduled later.

Approximately 30 students attended the first lesson two weeks ago.
