

Pollsters Ask University Women What They Wear in Bed; 9% Don't

By Dave Cromwell

At Ohio State a poll recently was taken by one of the university's service fraternities to discover the answers to the following profound questions: "What kind of sleeping apparel do college women wear to bed?" and "How many college women sleep with toy teddy bears?"

Armed with the above questions, members of the fraternity plunged into their new and startling poll.

Both scholastic and social lives were forgotten while members rushed to compile the "vital statistics" obtained.

More than 1,100 University women were questioned during the supper hour. Of this number, 82 per cent told pollsters that pajamas are their nightly attire; 9.4 per cent claimed that they dispose of all sleeping apparel; 1 per cent sleep in slips; 7.5 per cent take to nightgowns.

The most spectacular result of the poll shows that 16 per cent of those women interviewed sleep with a toy teddy bear. Another 33.6 per cent keep a teddy bear in their rooms for company.

The largest majority of the women questioned, 40 per cent, claimed possession of a toy in some form, be it dog, donkey, monkey, kangaroo, bear, or lion.

Some women, upon being questioned as to the purpose of this assortment of toys, gave the following answers: "I just adore animals"; "I have one to keep me warm"; and, most prevalent, was the response, "It was a gift from my boyfriend."

Model Railroaders Set Meeting Today

The University Model Railroad Club, sponsored by the Army Transportation Corps, will hold its first winter term meeting at 3 p.m. today in room 8, ROTC Building.

The project for this term will be landscaping and terracing the model track layout which is now only partially completed. More men interested in model railroading and landscape architecture are needed, according to Lt. Col. John H. Cunningham, transportation corps instructor.

The club has an order, from the army, more trackage, switches, cars, and electrical equipment and expects to complete the layout this year.

Meetings will be held from 3-5 p.m. each Tuesday.

USA Interviews Angna Enters Get Underway To Perform Here

Interviews of candidates for the United States Association steering committee began Sunday night with four interviews by the present committee. Sessions will continue at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Student Union.

Students who petitioned for committee positions are Don Collin, Phil Johnson, Philip M. Gillivary, Clifton R. Dickerson, Arlo Giles, Bruce Wallace, Dick Lee, Helen E. Jackson, Marian Briner, and Bill Lees.

Students must be interviewed by the committee before recommendations are made at a general assembly of the USA party Jan. 30.

"If candidates are unable to be present at the regular interview session, they must make arrangements with the committee," Ron Phillips, president, stated.

Petitions not recommended by the committee may be nominated from the floor at the general party assembly, if 10 persons are present to second the nomination, he explained.

As soon as a lifeguard can be hired Condon Lake will be opened for swimming.

Angna Enters, "first mime of our day," will appear under the sponsorship of the University theater Feb. 12, as a special attraction.

Admission for season ticket holders is $2, and for non-season ticket holders, $2.50, Theater Business Manager Virginia Hall announced. Mail orders are now being accepted.

Miss Enters, in her "Theatre of Angna Enters," presents, with pantomime and dance against a background of music, a series of sketches, each a complete story in itself.

"It's just a good show," Miss Enters likes to describe her performance, since she admits it is almost impossible to label her acts.

Her sketches are short, vivid, and done without benefit of scenery. Her performance in Eugene is part of her seventh trans-continental tour.

In addition to her Monday performance, she will give a guest matinee Saturday, Feb. 10, open to conferees of the Northwest Drama conference only.

Inquiring Reporter Students Give OK to Humor Publication

By Helen Jackson

Is another publication in the offing? Well, at least one has been proposed—a campus humor magazine, such as is published at many colleges and universities.

"What do you think of the proposed campus humor magazine?" was the question asked students.

Connie Jackson—senior in general social science—"I think it's a very good idea, but I don't think it would necessarily have to come under the jurisdiction of the Publications Board."

Don Kitchen—sophomore in liberal arts—"I've seen the one at the University of Washington and it's very good. Most of the material included in it you could get in any daily newspaper, however. I really don't know whether it would be a very good idea or not."

Oskar Hoessl—foreign student from Munich, Germany—"I like originality and if a humor magazine is to be inaugurated I think they should use their own jokes rather than using old jokes."

Dick Neibaur—freshman in liberal arts—"I think it's a good idea. Most other colleges have them and I find them most enjoyable. It would put a few kicks in the daily routine."

Marian Brown—sophomore in liberal arts—"Really, I think it's a good idea if it is supervised so that it doesn't get too off-color in content as some of them are."

Gary Finnegan—sophomore in sociology—"I think as far as being able to sell it, the students would undoubtedly buy it. They all like comics. If the proceeds go to a worthy cause, it would be a very good thing."

Dave Wik—junior in journalism—"I think it's a good idea to have a student publication like that. If it comes anywhere near the Stanford 'Chaparral' it would be even better. Besides entertainment for those reading it, it would be good experience for those students in publishing it."

Jerry Hunter—Fifth year student in architecture—"I don't know anything about it. But I suppose it would be okay if the students had control of it and the University didn't censor it so that it didn't have much left in it."

Grad Students Offered Program Of Foreign Study

Fellowships for study abroad next year are being offered by the Institute of International Education to interested graduate students.

The fellowships are not related to the Fulbright program and travel is not included in most of the fellowships, but candidates recommended for the French Government awards can apply for travel assistance under the plan.

Countries in which the fellowships are available include Austria, England, France, Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland. Travel fellowships are also being offered to Latin American countries.

General eligibility requires that a candidate hold a bachelor's degree or be a graduate of a professional school of recognized standing (or meet this requirement by the summer of 1951), be an American citizen and be able to read, write, and speak the language of the country in which he wishes to study. Most of the awards are open to men and women.

For further information, those interested in the program should contact James D. Kline, associate director of student affairs. Deadline for filing applications is Mar. 1.
