

Newburn: Steady Year

Added to this is the possibility of veterans' benefits for military personnel now fighting in Korea, as well as for the 18-year-olds who may be drafted under the military defense bill. The new draftees would complete military service in 27 months and many would be expected to enter college if a benefit program is enacted, Dr. Newburn declared.

Newburn warned that the analysis was very tentative. A concrete picture of next year's enrollment prospects cannot be given until there is something more definite to base it on, he said.

When asked his personal stand on the drafting of 18-year-olds, the president said "from a humanitarian viewpoint, I hate to see it, but looking at the entire picture I would have to say I'd go along with the department of defense."

He added, "I think it's bad whether the boy is 18 or 19 to send him into combat without adequate training."

Wants Flexible Program

"I'd like to see a program with flexibility as opposed to the Conant plan, and as I analyze it, the defense department bill will leave this flexibility."

He predicted that there is "not much likelihood" of programs like the ASTP of the last war coming in.

Concerning other programs for next year, President Newburn said acceleration or lengthening of the academic year is favored over enrollment of selected high school students.

The University had a program permitting selected men not through high school to enroll during the last war. However, not more than 25 students applied, and "no such program is contemplated now," President Newburn said.

Enrollment of women is expected to remain fairly constant as it did during World War II.

Pound Speech

by checks and balances cannot obtain these solutions of problems.

A service state, said Pound, undertakes to perform all kinds of services for mankind, except perhaps the welfare of souls in the hereafter.

Pound went on to list some of the ways in which the law has recently changed. Speaking with a wonderful sense of humor, he often had his audience chuckling out loud.

He spoke of the distilled meaning of words, or the change in the meaning of words from the original situation to which they applied. Telling of the Italian waiter who insisted that a certain cut of meat was beef steak, mutton-beef steak, Pound illustrated how the whole precept of a norm or decision can be distorted.

Tracing the evolution of the fixing of liabilities for injuries from the time when it consisted merely in the idea of vengeance to now when people believe that someone must pay for it, Pound talked of the "doctrine of the involuntary good Samaritan."

This is the man, he said, who is made liable for an injury simply because he is the person who can afford to pay for it, whether or not the guilt is actually his.

"The insurance doctrine" means simply that if an accident happens to any of us all should chip in to pay for it, said Pound.

He also told of the changes in the meaning of a contract. Originally, said Pound, a contract was law; now some have gone so far as to say that a "promise is but a prediction."

"The function of a service state," continued Pound, "is to relieve people of the burden of their promises." And we are fast moving in that general direction, he concluded.

House Okays Alcohol Education

A bill compelling state colleges to teach prospective educators the effect of alcohol on the human body was passed by the State House of Representatives Wednesday and sent to the Senate.

The proposed bill, however, does not specify whether the instruction of alcohol will be taught in the physical education or the education departments of the respective universities, P. B. Jacobson, dean of the School of Education, stated Thursday.

The bill has been introduced and promoted by the Oregon Fellowship, which is composed of members of Alcoholics Anonymous, the Oregon Liquor Control Commission, and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Similar bills have been passed by the legislature as early as 1901, but they have never been applied effectively to the education system, largely due to misunderstanding of the bill, Jacobson explained.

Students to Pay For OSC Game

University of Oregon students will need general admission tickets, at $1.50 each, for admittance to the UO-OSC basketball game at Gill Coliseum in Corvallis Saturday night.

One-hundred tickets were still available at the athletic ticket office in McArthur Court Wednesday afternoon. The office will be open from 8-1 Friday and Saturday; and 1-5 Friday.

University rooters will sit under the east basket on the lower floor in a reserved section. The section will be saved for University students until 7:30 p.m. Game time is 8 p.m.

Deadline Changed For AWS Positions

Petition deadline for AWS offices has been changed from Feb. 14 to Feb. 1. so the elections will not interfere with house elections, according to president Barbara Stevenson.

Positions open for freshmen women are sergeant-at-arms and reporter. Sophomore women should petition for secretary and treasurer, and junior women for president.

Miss Stevenson at the Kappa Alpha Theta house and Eve Overback at Hendricks Hall will accept the petitions until 5 p.m. Feb. 1.

Defense Plan Set

Jobs delegated in civilian defense will be as similar as possible to the person's present work. "For instance, I. I. Wright, head of the physical plant, will probably be assigned to buildings and utilities," Little explained.

The entire program is according to the state plan issued to the press by Gov. Douglas McKay. It is being enacted in cooperation with the city of Eugene and Keith Kennell, defense director. In many cases, Eugene will supply facilities, such as hospitalization.

Student workers will be at a minimum, due to the draft situation. However, nurses' aides will be trained by the Red Cross at Sacred Heart Hospital, Little pointed out.

Students in Setup

So far the students working on defense are Don Paillette and Eve Overback, ASUO Executive Council members, who will conduct housing surveys in fraternities and sororities as their first task. "I would like to stress that any action at all bearing on civilian defense, such as these surveys, should be cleared through me," Little added.

Phil Johnson, sophomore in Liberal Arts, has been appointed the University representative to the disaster committee of the Eugene Red Cross.

Bees Do It Also, Group Asks How?

Sex life of bees will be the topic of discussion at the weekly biology seminar, 4 p.m. today in 103 Deady.

B. H. McConnaughey, assistant professor of biology, will lecture on "The Instincts and Behavior of Arthropods" or sex among bees.

Assisting McConnaughey will be Frank Wolfe and John Shaw, seniors in biology, and William Bishop, graduate student in biology.

Biology seminars are open not only to biology or science majors, but to all who are interested in the topics to be discussed.

Pacific Quakes Byerly's Topic

Pacific Coast earthquakes will be the subject of two lectures by Perry Byerly, professor of seismology at the University of California. The talks are scheduled for 8 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday in the Student Union.

Byerly is a 1951 Condon lecturer, sponsored by the State Board of Higher Education. His purpose is to make scientific research more understandable to laymen.

While on the campus, Byerly will conduct three interdepartmental science seminars on "Theory and Methods of Seismic Prospecting." These seminars, which are open to the public, will be held Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 4 p.m. in 103 Deady.

Help Requested For Dads' Day

Petitions are being called for workers on promotions, decorations, awards, basketball games, and special events committees, Dad's Day committee chairmen announced Thursday.

Petitions may be turned in by 5 p.m. Monday to Dave Rodway, Phi Delta Theta, or the ASUO office in the Student Union.

All petitions will be used, and particular emphasis is being placed on freshmen and sophomores to petition for the events, Rodway stated Thursday.

Digging Completed For SU Flagpole

The excavation has been completed for the proposed Student Union flagpole, which will be erected in approximately three weeks, to Harry Jacoby, assistant manager of the physical plant, reported Thursday.

The flagpole will be located on the north side of the front entrance walk, facing toward 13th St. It is part of the landscape project for the Student Union grounds.

Legislature Passes Alcohol Study Bill

A bill to compel state colleges of education to teach students about the effects of alcohol on the human body was passed by the house of the state legislature Wednesday and was sent to the senate.

Representative John Hounsell, Hood River, facetiously attempted to have the bill amended so that colleges would have to teach reading, writing and arithmetic.

The Emerald was unable to learn Wednesday evening whether the proposed law would apply to the University of Oregon.

Red Cross Drive Needs Petitioners

Five committee chairmanships are open for the forthcoming campus Red Cross drive, according to General Chairman Kay Kuckenberg who called for petitions Tuesday.

Chairmen of the following committees will be named Friday: Promotion, collection, flying speeches, posters, and speakers.

Miss Kuckenberg said the petitions are due at Delta Gamma by 5 p.m. Friday.
