UO Faculty Approves Senate Reorganization

A plan for the reorganization of the Faculty Senate was approved at a meeting of the faculty Wednesday.

The new Senate will be more nearly representative of the general faculty in the distribution of its membership between the College and the professional schools. The election of half its members by the general faculty is designed to encourage an all-University point of view in the deliberations of the body.

The plan, which will go into effect July 1, provides for a Senate of 28 members; seven to be elected by the faculty of the College of Liberal Arts, one by each of the faculties of the seven professional schools, and 14 by the general University faculty. Of the 14 elected by majority vote by the general faculty, seven will be persons affiliated with the professional schools and seven persons affiliated with the College of Liberal Arts. All Senate members will be chosen by secret ballot.

The reorganization resulted from a study begun two years ago by a special Committee on Faculty Organization, headed by Dr. Raymond T. Ellickson, head of the department of physics and associate dean of the graduate school.

At present the Faculty Senate has 30 members, with the professional schools holding a larger representation than the College of Liberal Arts.

The function of the Senate is to study all proposals for changes in faculty policies and all proposed changes in curriculum, and then present recommendations to the faculty before final action. It may also initiate motions for changes in policy for presentation to the faculty. The Senate holds regular monthly meetings during the academic year, a week before the monthly meeting of the faculty.

'Red' Manifesto

what is being said on international problems. Faught said the questioned article came from Prague.

The EOC council called the article "essentially a manifesto of the recent Congress of International Union of Students at Prague" and said it repeated official statements of the Soviets and Chinese Reds.

The University of Oregon is a member of the Oregon Federation of College Leaders. Four members of the Executive Council attended a meeting of the federation in Corvallis Nov. 10. The Emerald was unable to reach any member of the council Wednesday evening for comment.

Bill Maxwell, president of the federation which publishes the bulletin, said at Corvallis that its aim is to offer a balanced fare of propaganda and fact. The article attacked by the EOC council "stood as pure propaganda," he said. "We merely passed it on and its publication does not mean we believe in it."
