 on "I Hate Newspaper Columns." Keene will present the annual Eric W. Allen Memorial Fund address; Clifford McDowell, manager of NEA-Acme Newspictures in San Francisco, will speak on "Bringing the War Home In Pictures"; and a panel, composed of three Oregon editors, Charles A. Sprague, Oregon Statesman; Bill Robinson, Madras Pioneer; and Gwen Coffin, Wallowa County Chieftain, Enterprise, will discuss "How Can Editorial Pages Stimulate Better Thinking?"

At the concluding luncheon, Art Lee, public relations director of the Atomic Energy Commission's Arco, Idaho, project will speak on "Reporting the Atom."

Lee was graduated from the University of Minnesota School of Journalism in 1936, and served as reporter on the Minot, N. D., Daily News; published the Ronan, Montana, Pioneer; worked for Press Associated; and served on the editorial staff of Better Homes and Gardens prior to his present position with AEC.

Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, will hold public initiation at 4:30 p.m. in the Student Union.

Banquet Set for 6:30 p.m.
 Sabine will preside at the annual banquet held in the Eugene Hotel at 6:30 p.m. tonight. The Eugene Gleemen, led by Theodore Kratt, dean of the School of Music, will provide the banquet entertainment. Winners of the Newspaper Week Essay Contest will be presented with their awards.

Murray M. Moler, intermountain manager for the United Press, who recently returned from the war zone, will address the group on "Dateline—Korea."

Breakfasts for daily and weekly newspaper groups and Press Women of Oregon will be held Saturday morning at the Eugene Hotel. Yoshiko Seki, special student in journalism, will address the press women on her experiences when she was touring with Emperor Hirohito of Japan as an imperial staff secretary after Allied occupation.

Following the breakfasts the daily and weekly forums will discuss "Cost Cutting."

May to Lead Business Meeting
 The semi-annual business meeting of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers' Association will be held at 11:30 Saturday morning with President Walter W. R. May presiding.

'Red' Article

 Maxwell said Wednesday that the aim of the bulletin is to offer a balanced fare of propaganda and fact. The article in dispute, he said, "stood as pure propaganda. We merely passed it on and its publication does not mean we believe in it."

Pamphlets from the International Union of Students are received monthly by student leaders, Mountain said Thursday. The information is designed to attract students of varying religious, political, and cultural situations towards anti-American policies.

"The International Union of Students attempts to appeal to students through a false cry for peace and an attack against the use of the atomic bomb," Mountain stated. Representatives of the group consist largely of persons living in "Iron Curtain" countries, Mountain said, but also include individuals from South America, Great Britain, and the United States.

Pro-communist literature which has been received by the ASUO office has been used to reveal Red propaganda methods and its anti-American appeal has been ignored, Mountain indicated.

 Rebec's will stipulated that Co-Ed Housing has only possessory title to the property, and that it should pass to the state if the cooperative should disband or change its purpose.

Court Set Tax Value
 The court set a value on the house for taxing purposes on the basis of testimony stating that the group had paid $50 a month rent to Rebec during his lifetime. Attorneys for the state treasurer were instructed to draw an order calling for payment of a similar amount to the state.

This payment would continue "for an indefinite period" while Co-Ed Housing occupies the property.

Graduate Accepts Klamath Falls Job

Francis L. Mathews, University graduate in psychology, has accepted a position as probation officer for juvenile delinquents in Klamath County.

Mathews is rated as an excellent counsellor by Howard R. Taylor, head of the psychology department.

The new probation officer, who will be stationed at Klamath Falls, has been working for his masters degree on campus this year.
