

Student Entertainment 'Bad' IFC Nixes Rushing Proposal

By Bill Frye

Campus entertainment was dealt a slap in the face Tuesday by two University officials who asserted that a thorough housecleaning is necessary to bring it back to a respectable level.

Mrs. Golda Wickham, director of women's affairs, and Ray Hawk, director of men's affairs, declared that student entertainment had gone completely out of bounds in judging good taste in entertainment at some of this year's social events.

The comments of Hawk and Mrs.

Wickham came after they had met with Senior Class President Steve Church and five other students who put on entertainment during the intermission of the Senior Ball.

Hawk said that two women and two men of the group of five had been placed on "personal probation" by himself and Mrs. Wickham because of the "smutty" acts in which they participated. A third woman was prohibited from taking part in any campus entertainment for the rest of her college career.

The action paralleled steps taken by Hawk fall term in which one student was barred permanently from taking part in campus entertainment following his appearance at a Homecoming rally. Hawk said the student's remarks had brought "an avalanche of protest" from indignant parents and townspeople who were attending the rally.

In referring to entertainment presented at the Senior Ball, Hawk, who is senior class adviser, said that normally he would have checked the script, but that he was out of town that day and did not get to the dance until just before intermission.

The two officials agreed, however, that it wasn't their desire to "act as censors" for all the entertainment that is put on at campus events. "That should be left to the students," Hawk said, and added that they should "get something churning within student government."

He pointed to the Executive Council as the place to start and said it should present plans whereby the campus entertainment chairman would be responsible for seeing that entertainers kept within the circle of good taste.

The Inter-Fraternity Council Thursday evening expressed its disapproval of the present rushing-pledging compromise with the Inter-Dormitory Council and appointed a committee to study the agreement with members of the IDC.

IFC president Bill Harber said, "The present arrangement is not working out for fraternities. It is a one-sided system. Fraternities deserve a better deal—a fair chance at freshmen."

The plan now in effect is the result of a compromise between IFC and the IDC fall term when the "hands-off" policy, complete disassociation of fraternities with freshmen, proved to be unenforceable. The fall term agreement abolished the provision prohibiting social intercourse between fraternities and freshmen and established restrictions on rushing and pledging. However, curbs were placed on participation of freshmen in fraternity activities with basic loyalties directed toward dormitories.

The Inter-Dormitory Council issued a letter Feb. 20 recommending that all rushing and pledging be delayed until the beginning of the sophomore year. The dormitory council said that halls can have no continuity of spirit or hall organization from year to year so long as fraternities have pledges living in dormitories while their hearts belong to the fraternity.

The IFC criticized the present "melancholy compromise" because its provisions do not allow sufficient contact between freshmen and fraternities of which they are pledges. Dormitories are given precedence in scheduling of living organization meetings, IFC members said.

Donald DuShane, director of student affairs, told the fraternity re-

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, FRIDAY, MARCH 2, 1951

I.R.L. Conference Opens

OFFICERS OF THE Oregon High School International Relations League are, right to left: Robert Job, Springfield High School, historian; Eleanore Rigby, Parkrose High School, secretary treasurer; James Gleason, Medford High School, vice-president; and Robert Glass, Eugene High School, president.

'U.S., U.N., World Crisis' Chosen Theme of Meeting

Opening session of the fourth annual International Relations League Conference begins at 8 this morning in the Student Union, with Robert Glass, state IRL president, presiding.

Registration of high school delegates and advisers will continue from 7:45 a.m. until its completion, with the total to reach approximately 235, Charles P. Schleicher, professor of political science and conference director, said.

General subject for the conference, which is sponsored by the Oregon Educational Association and the University, is "The United Nations, the United States and the World Crisis."

Newburn Will Greet Delegates

University President H. K. Newburn will welcome delegates at the opening session. A discussion of "The United Nations Today" will follow. Speakers will be Ivan Nagy, assistant professor of political science, and Paul S. Dull, associate professor of political science and history.

Committee meetings for roundtable discussions will occupy the remainder of the day, with a luncheon and business meeting scheduled from 12:30-2 p.m. in the SU ballroom. Discussion questions for the roundtables were prepared in a guide compiled by Schleicher, who is executive secretary of the International Relations Committee of the OEA.

U. N. Official to Speak

William J. Bruce, assistant director of the United Nations statistical office, will deliver the main address at the banquet at 6:30 tonight in the ballroom. His subject will be "The United Nations—Opportunities for Leadership."

Barry Mountain, ASU president, representing the student body, will welcome delegates. Entertainment at the banquet will be presented by University, Eugene, and Willamette High School students. Dancing and recreation will follow.

A panel by foreign students of the University will begin the Saturday program at 8:30 a.m. "As Others See Us" will be the topic. Participants will be Basdeo Maharaja, India; Arne Doring, Sweden; Maurice Morello, France; Yoshiko Seki, Japan; and Oscar Hoesl, Germany. James Kline, foreign students advisor, will preside.

OSC SWIPES PUDDLES!

Puddles, feathered mascot of the University of Oregon, was apparently stolen from the campus by "aggie" marauders early Thursday morning.

A report from Oregon State College received Thursday informed the Emerald that a large white duck had "appeared" on the OSC campus. The caller requested information concerning the whereabouts of Puddles. A check with the home of Athletic Director Leo Harris revealed that the duck was missing.

The tip came to the Emerald when OSC Daily Barometer staffman Jim Clabby called from Corvallis to inquire about the mascot. He described the duck on the OSC campus as "large and white." Asked whether the bird was a he or a she, Clabby replied, "I dunno—I'm not that familiar with ducks."

The prestige attached to capture of the mascot has its drawbacks, however. At last report, Clabby was playing nursemaid by feeding the duck a mixture of oatmeal and water. He said he had a hard time finding anybody on the OSC campus—home of a large school of agriculture—to tell him what to feed a duck.

Puddles is expected to put in an appearance at tonight's Oregon-OSC game in Corvallis' Gill Coliseum.

'Meanest Men' Steal Alpha Xi Red Cross Fund

The campus Thursday had two candidates for the title of "meanest man in the world," even though they didn't collect much.

Two unidentified men—apparently of college age—presented themselves as Red Cross drive representatives at 7:20 p.m. Thursday at the Alpha Xi Delta sorority house and collected the house's daily donation to the fund.

The money, $2.80, hasn't been seen since.

Red Cross drive heads warned other living organizations that Joanne Kelley, Delta Gamma, and Joan Renner, Kappa Kappa Gamma, are the only persons authorized to collect house contributions.

Stephanie Scott, the Alpha Xi representative who turned over the money, did not know the two men, who were wearing Red Cross buttons. One wore a leather jacket. City police are investigating the case.

'Goodbye, My Fancy' Opens Here Tonight

"Goodbye, My Fancy," opens at 8 this evening in the new Arena Theater of Villard Hall. Otilie Seybolt directs the University Theater production.

Box office for the Broadway hit comedy will be moved from the main theater to the main hall of Villard at 7:30 each performance evening. The play will be presented tonight and Saturday, and Monday through Saturday next week.

Entrance to the Arena Theater is through the north door of Villard. Box office is in the center hall. There are no reserved seats, but there are no tickets available for either performance this weekend.

Lead roles in the Fay Kanin comedy will be played by Gerry Hettinger, Ed Ragozzino, Beverly Gratton, and Donn Doak.

Technical director is William E. Schlosser, assisted by Harry Bidlake. Stage manager for the production is Kathleen Wisdom, who is also assistant director.

On the stage crews are Patricia Matsler, Miss Forbes, Avis Lange, Gailerd Smith, and Joanne Secoy.

Heading the staff of business manager Virginia Hall are Mary Ellen Burrell and Phyllis Keller, ticket managers; Ralph Wide, house manager; and Phillip Johnson, assistant house manager.

Red Cross Drive Donations Far Below Quota

The campus Red Cross Drive goes into its last day today, with the University far behind the $3,000 total set last year. As of Thursday morning, the total collections had not yet hit 25 per cent of the hoped-for total.

Thursday night Collections Chairman Virginia Kellogg reported that $462.55 had been raised since Monday, when the drive started. The fund-raising campaign will continue into Saturday, and is not expected to be extended.

Lane County Red Cross officials have set no official quota to be reached by the University. The campus total will be included with that of Eugene and surrounding area. However, Miss Kellogg said that the Red Cross committee and

Last Day to Report

All living organizations must turn in figures of amount of money collected today by 7 p.m. to the chairmen of the men's and women's collections committees.

Men's houses are to contact Joanne Renner, Kappa Kappa Gamma, and women's houses Joanne Kelley, Delta Gamma.

Eugene Red Cross officials had assumed that the University would do at least as well as it did during the Red Cross drive last year.

Pi Beta Phi and Sigma Phi Epsilon continued to lead living organizations in amount of money collected. Women's houses still lead men's in amount raised. No house has yet reported 100 per cent subscription to the drive.

Representatives in each living organization are asking members to contribute at least one dollar to the campaign, for which they will receive a membership card in the 1951 Red Cross. For those unable to give $1 now, pledge cards will be given, to be replaced with a membership card when the full amount is contributed.

Off-campus students may contribute at booths in the Co-op and in the Student Union. An off-campus collections committee, under the chairmanship of Chuck Isaak, is also circulating through the University housing projects.

The University of Oregon is one of nearly 3,000 colleges and universities throughout the country which are participating in the annual Red Cross drive for funds. Some, like the University of Oregon, have practically separate fund-raising campaigns. Others are participating with local organizations.

At the present figure of $407.51, it can be estimated that about 407 people have so far contributed $1.
