Inquiring Reporter Students Give Dance Plans Green Light

By Herb Voreberg

The Student Union recreation and dance committees have proposed a series of advanced dancing lessons, for students who desire to improve their dancing. Today's Inquiring Reporter question was: "What is your opinion of the plan to have advanced dancing instruction on the campus?"

Norm Kaplon, senior in business: "I believe that advanced dancing instruction is very badly needed on this campus. Many of the girls I have danced with know the fundamentals they learned in high school, but can't follow any steps except the very simple ones."

Lynn Jensen, freshman in liberal arts: "Do you mean modern dances such as the rumba, samba, etc.? If so, I think it would be capital sport."

Don Lee, senior in architecture: "If more people learned to dance better, it might improve their social standings, if they so chose."

Brent Bates, freshman in speech: "I think that advanced dancing instructions would help students appreciate the fine art of social dancing."

Clarice Duling, freshman in journalism: "I'm all for it. Such lessons might keep me from stepping on my boy friends toes."

Dave Karr, sophomore in business: "I hear that the instructions might be by self-arranged couples. I think more would be gained if the instructions were on an individual basis."
